Two Kinds of Dinosaur. They Fought on Thursday. Carnera vs. Loughran. One Lady Screamed.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

LAST THURSDAY night, Primo Carnera, Italian prize-fighter, heavyweight champion of the world, fought Tommy Loughran, Irishman from Philadelphia, who hoped to take Carnera's championship, and failed.

A bullfight in ancient Crete, near the Minotaur's labyrinth, with young girls of sixteen, metal belts around their waists, literally taking the bull by the horns and vaulting over his back, would have told you something about Cretan civilization.

Olympic games in Greece; fights of gladiators against each other and wild beasts in Rome; ancient fights with gloves made chiefly of iron, a slight blow meaning a fractured skull and death; the fighter with the net to throw over his enemy, and the three-pronged spear to stab him to death; men yelling, women shrieking, turning down their thumbs, demanding death for a fallen gladiator, would have taught something about those ancient civilizations.

SIMILARLY, a modern bullfight in Spain, or a prizefight here, describes what those countries are pleased to call their "civilization."

GIANT CARNERA, six feet six in height, weighed two hundred and seventy pounds in the ring. Loughran weighed one hundred and eighty-four, his height five feet eleven and a half inches.

Before they fought, doctors examined them to be sure that a hard blow would probably not kill one of them. They examined especially the smaller man. Lawyers served writs of garnishment, preventing payment of money to one of those interested. Ancient gladiators never had that complication.

Then, after a few miserable creatures had given dull exhibitions of brutal attempts at boxing, "the main event" was produced.

IT WAS cloudy, rained a little while the various bouts proceeded, so it was "a poor house."

Mr. James Johnston, matchmaker, promoter, who rarely fails in any undertaking, admitted that he did not know what the world was coming to, when such a fight "drew" ONLY forty to fifty thousand dollars, as much for forty-five minutes of fighting as a good college professor would earn in ten years, or a school teacher in a lifetime.

SEATS AROUND the fighting ring stretched in rising tiers far back into the night, brilliant lights flooded the ring where the men sat in diagonally opposite corners, waiting for the bell to say, "Fight."

In one corner, Tommy Loughran, worried, keen, plucky Irishman, thirty-two years old, and too old for a prizefighter. The chances were long against him. A very religious young man, he had whispered in the ear of Mr. James Johnston:

"May God take me away if I'm not heavyweight champion of the world by eleven o'clock tonight."

He was not champion at eleven, probably never will be if he must take the championship from Carnera.

God did not take him away, and he made a fight that, according to those that know about such things, was entirely creditable, "staying" the fifteen rounds, never knocked off his feet.

He did so well that Mr. James Johnston, who always wears a derby hat except in Florida, and hardly ever makes a positive statement, remarked:

"Loughran could have licked any man in the world tonight, except Carnera."

YOU TURN to the Carnera corner and again observe that extraordinary specimen of the human race, sufficiently interesting and remarkable to make a study of him worth while, even with prize-ring brutality a part of the study.

After seeing the photographs of his fine, powerful Italian mother, from whom, of course, he got his size, strength and other qualities, you wish she would write for Good Housekeeping Magazine, "How I Raised My Baby." Especially you would like to see a picture of that baby, as he was just after he arrived.

Carnera, twenty-seven, and much younger for that age than the average Anglo-Saxon prizefighter, has not yet reached his prime. The Latin race keeps its physical power longer than the Anglo-Saxon, partly because it does not drink so much alcohol or dissipate so violently when prosperity comes.

Our Anglo-Saxon athletes at thirty-five are usually telling how good they used to be. The great jai-alai players of Spain, intrepid six-foot athletes, are past forty before they reach the peak of their playing.

TO DESCRIBE Carnera's bigness so that words will make you see him is difficult. Perhaps Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald, will do it. She was there, with her chin on the edge of the ring, occasionally overcoming her feminine delicacy and horror of brutality long enough for a prolonged peek.

If you put the two biggest Saratoga trunks you ever saw side by side the top of them would look like Carnera's back, minus the muscles.

His ankles are as big around as your legs, unless you are fat, his chest deep, with muscles standing out from the top down to the thin waist in terraces, as olive trees are planted in Italy. To imitate his legs take two good-sized tree trunks, cover

BANKSVILLE BOY FLEES JAIL IN ILLINOIS

Accused in Murder of Highway Patrolman In Bridgeville

Held in the killing of a Pennsylvania highway patrolman at Bridgeville, Thomas A. Davis, Jr., 19, of Pittsburgh, escaped from jail at Carlyle, Ill., last night, Carlyle authorities announced today.

An Associated Press dispatch quoted the authorities as saying the youth fled from the Clinton County (Illinois) jail during the night, while awaiting extradition to Pennsylvania.

The escape blocked long-pursued efforts of state and county authorities to find and convict the alleged slayer of Highway Patrolman Herbert Brantlinger, who was shot down September 4 when he attempted to capture suspects in a gasoline station holdup near Bridgeville.

Davis, who lived at 2956 Banksville road, was a son of a former justice of the peace. He was arrested in Illionis in connection with a holdup similar to the one in which Brantlinger was slain.

Davis escaped from the jail by tearing loose a drain pipe with which he pried apart the bars of his cell.

Police said they had a confession from him that he shot Brantlinger.

He is accused at Carlyle of wounding a deputy sheriff who attempted to arrest him.

McNair Reinstates Police Head Fired By Smith

BULLETIN.

A short time after he was "fired" by Public Safety Director Ralph E. Smith, Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall was sworn back into office by Mayor McNair today. Commenting on his reversal of Smith's action, McNair said:

"When I was informed of Director Smith's dismissal of Supt. Marshall, I asked the Director to hold it up for a few days. Director Smith O. K.'d the suggestion. Inasmuch as he already has been dismissed, I think I had better swear him in again to make it legal."

Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall was fired by Public Safety Director Ralph E. Smith today to climax the quarrel in the police department over the recent shakeup.

Marshall went at once to Mayor McNair's office to see what McNair "has to say about it."

MARSHALL CALLED

Director Smith called Marshall to his office this morning along with Assistant Supt. Andrew Charles and Detective Capt. Frank R. Boyd to question him concerning published statements attributed to Marshall.

After telling Marshall he was discharged, Smith appointed Charles acting superintendent.

It was a fiery session, to which newspapermen were invited. It was climaxed by the following exchange:

Smith:

"Superintendent, I think you had better resign."

Marshall:

"I will not resign. You will have to fire me."

Smith:

"Well, I discharge you now."

Marshall stood firm in his assertion that changes were made in the detective bureau without his knowledge. A list of changes he was shown last Sunday night, he said, was not the same as that announced by Smith several days later.

In the changes, Boyd was demoted from inspector of detectives to captain and 20 detectives discharged.

READS CLIPPINGS

Director Smith had before him several newspaper clippings in which Marshall was quoted. As Smith read these, Marshall interrupted:

"I deny mentioning the name of Davey Lawrence at any time."

Some reports, not in the Sun-Telegraph, quoted Marshall as naming Lawrence, county Democratic chairman, in criticising the conduct of the police affairs.

Hopkins Smiles as Mayor Charges Politics

Mayor McNair vented his wrath on Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, today because, the Mayor said, Pittsburgh's Democratic administration has been ignored by the federal government.

Hopkins, here for a conference with welfare officials of nine states, laughed at the Mayor's tirade, delivered in the William Penn Hotel, where McNair called Hopkins out of a conference.

REFUSES TO POSE

In high dudgeon, McNair refused to pose with Hopkins for a photograph. The Mayor also let it be known he was peeved because of a newspaper cartoon portraying him in short pants.

Said the Mayor:

"Mr. Hopkins, we are giving 30 million dollars to the Federal government each year. Will you tell me why you are penalizing this Democratic administration in Pittsburgh? We can't even get a loan of a million and a quarter for a housing project that is absolutely guaranteed.

"You know, I am a Democratic candidate for governor. Here I am, and all the Federal payrollers in the state are opposed to me. I am going through the state and holler."

HOPKINS AMUSED

Hopkins chuckled as he said:

"Well, I favor a democracy and I think you ought to go

Summons Strength To Resume Testimony; Reiterates Innocence

BULLETIN.

CHICAGO, March 3.—(AP.)—Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop, on trial for the second time for the slaying of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, collapsed today during cross examination by the state.

International News Service.

CHICAGO, March 3.—Health permitting, the keen-minded, elderly Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop again will be lifted up to the witness stand today to resume what promises to be another "battle of brains" in Chicago's murder mystery trial.

As the dawn spread over her cot in the County Jail Infirmary, word seeped out from the closely-guarded premises that she was recovering sufficiently from her emotional experiences on the stand and at the hands of Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty yesterday to appear in court again today. Thus the "battle of brains" will continue uninterruptedly.

The accused slayer of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, resolute and eager to cry out again her innocence in the case, reportedly had spent an "easy night" in her cell, following a collapse last night after a day of sharp cross-examination at the hands of Dougherty.

NOT AFRAID, SHE SAYS

Only a complete breakdown will prevent her from returning today to re-emphasize her story that she did not murder her son's wife,

DILLINGER, GANG CHIEF, ESCAPES

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 3.—(AP.)—John Dillinger, killer and bank robber, escaped from the County Jail today.

Dillinger was reported to be in an automobile and headed for Chicago about 60 miles away.

Jail attaches said Dillinger seized a machine gun from a guard and threatened his way out of the "model, escape-proof" Lake County Jail.

He was awaiting trial for murder in the machine gunning of a policeman during a bank robbery two months ago while Dillinger and a band of outlaw fugitives from the Indiana State Prison were terrorizing the Midwest with bank robberies and killings.

Immediately after Dillinger escaped, after 9:30 a. m., the county jail was locked under order from Mrs. Lillian Harvey, woman sheriff of Lake County, in charge of the jail, who asserted when he was arrested that he would not escape from there. Her husband was slain by gangsters before she succeeded him as sheriff.

LAURA INGALLS FEARED LOST

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 3.—(AP.)—Fear that Laura Ingalls, New York woman flier, was forced down in some isolated section grew today as the hours passed without any report from her since she took off from the airport here at 3:30 p. m. yesterday for Savannah and Jacksonville.

Alarm was expressed by T. F. Haviland, Department of Commerce attache at the airport. He said:

"Undoubtedly she has cracked up."

Haviland sought to contact officials of the section between Beaufort, S. C., and Savannah to ask them to search for her.

Miss Ingalls is en route from New York to South America on a good will tour and stopped here yesterday to refuel. She should have reached Savannah by 4:30 p. m.

There is considerable marsh and swamp land, much of it almost inaccessible, between Beaufort and Savannah.

GREECE ORDERS INSULL OUT

ATHENS, March 3.—(AP.)—The foreign minister today notified the minister of the interior that Samuel Insull, Sr., former Chicago utilities operator, must leave Greece.

The notification said that the final extension of Insull's permit to remain in the country has expired.

Insull previously had gained repeated extensions of the permit by which he remained in Greece secure from United States government authorities who sought his extradition to face trial on charge of embezzlement and grand larceny in connection with the collapse of his Middle Western utilities organization.

Whether Insull will go to the United States was not immediately certain.

He merely is expelled from Greece and now may go to whatever country will receive him.

ALUMINUM PAY PACT SPURNED

Picket lines grew at the plants of the Aluminum Company of America today as employes taking a "holiday" scorned a wage agreement of union officers and the company.

After rejecting the agreement, which the company claimed would provide an 11 per cent wage increase, the workers prepared to hold a mass meeting today and draw up their own terms for settling the controversy.

Among the matters to be discussed at the meeting will be a demand for recognition of the union with a check-off system of paying union dues.

REJECT AGREEMENT

The agreement reached by officials of the National Council of the Aluminum Workers' [illegible] was presented to the workers at a mass meeting in Moose Temple, New Kensington, last night. It

Lack of Rain Saves District From Flood

Melting snow was pouring water into all streams today, but in the absence of a heavy rain no danger of a flood was in prospect, Observer W. S. Brotzman announced.

The stage at the Point was 11.4 feet and rising slowly. By tomorrow morning, Brotzman said, the rivers likely would reach 15 feet. The flood stage is 25 feet.

Only .08 inch of rain fell here. Rain was light in the Ohio valley.

Ice gorges in the upper rivers for the most part remained intact.

A gradual thaw was expected at Franklin. The river there is covered with 13 to 17 inches of ice.

The Youghiogheny River rose 4 feet at West Newton due to a gorge. No danger was anticipated.

An emergency committee, appointed by Mayor McNair, to prepare for possible flood conditions here, was to hold its second meeting today.

Maj. W. D. Styer, chief of the United States Engineers here, was to be invited to attend or send a representative. Weatherman Brotzman also has been named on the committee.

ROOSEVELT STARTS SECOND YEAR WITH TWO MAJOR PLANS

SEEKS POWER TO HANDLE WAR DEBTS

President Also Wants Return of Private Air Mail System

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt, entering the second year of the New Deal era tomorrow, has two more major steps in mind before the Congress adjourns.

One would press for legislation to handle the war debt situation, that problem which is so delicate, politically and internationally.

Another would re-establish a privately operated air mail system, shorn of what critics of the old system have called "abuses."

Looking forward, the second 12 months of the administration seems now to promise no such laws and presidential decrees as tumbled into the governmental hopper since Mr. Roosevelt took office a year ago tomorrow and promised "action."

PLANS UNDER DEBATE

Plans and problems aplenty are already under debate, however.

Congress is at work on the President's recommendation that vital security exchanges be regulated.

A cabinet committee is studying economic and social planning on a nation-wide scale. The program has begun in the Tennessee Valley. Large shifts of population eventually are contemplated.

A Roosevelt request for wide powers to negotiate tariff treaties with other nations, raising or lowering tariffs by as much as 50 per cent, is stirring turbulence in Congress.

At his urging, Congress is contemplating a federal commission to centralize the control of communications.

Before Congress also are proposals to place all crops under compulsory control. A major revision of the NRA starts on Monday.

right ahead and holler. I do it myself every once in a while."

He added:

"I don't have a thing to do about your housing problem, Mr. Mayor. Have you seen Secretary Ickes about it?"

McNair shot back:

"Yes, I spent a whole day with Ickes. He was as co'd as an iceberg."

Hopkins said:

"I think your facts are about 100 per cent wrong."

McNair came back:

"Well, I am a lawyer and here are the facts. We want to build 200 houses. We want a loan from the government. We can't get it because the administration seems to think I'm playing politics in asking for this loan.

"How about playing politics and giving Buck McGovern 30 million dollars for a swimming pool in a park?"

Hopkins laughed, shook hands with the Mayor and was about to depart when a photographer asked the two of them to pose.

M'NAIR BALKS

Hopkins was agreeable, but McNair turned on his heel with:

"I won't pose. I have to go to a garbage hearing. Anyhow these newspapers are against me. Did you see that ridiculous cartoon, depicting me in short pants?"

Hopkins posed by himself.

Seventy-five legislators, city and welfare officials representing Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, New York, New Jersey and Illinois came here to discuss relief problems with the federal relief head. The conference was first of a series of regional conferences.

Pittsburgh officials conferred with Hopkins in the Mayor's office regarding allocation of additional CWA funds to this city. This city has received about $1,000,000. It was originally scheduled to receive $2,500,000.

Following the City Hall meeting, a luncheon was to be held in the Chamber of Commerce at which Dr. Simeon D. Leland, finance expert of the University of Chicago, was to speak.

Hopkins is listed to speak tonight at a dinner in the Duquesne Club.

BANE SPEAKS

At the City Hall conference, Frank Bane, director of the American Public Welfare Association, said:

"We are talking and thinking about an emergency. We should consider this as a permanent condition or a continuous condition."

Poor relief laws are badly in need of revision, he said. Some states disfranchise the poor, while in others care of the indigent is let out to the lowest responsible bidder.

Louis Brownlow, director of the public administration clearing house, Chicago, urged a better administration of poor relief laws as well as their being brought up to date. More consideration should be given to those who administer the laws, such as social workers, he declared.

U. S. Interference May Force Industry to Organize in Self Defense, Asserts R. W. Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Noted Author and American Ambassador to Italy Under Two Administrations.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Following the public hearing on the NRA by which Gen. Johnson has, in effect, said, "Speak now or hold your peace," there will be, on the anniversary of inauguration, a general code meeting here in Washington.

This meeting might have the greatest significance.

The reason for this possible significance is found in the fact that industry as a whole might seize the opportunity to create its own unity and organize to speak for itself.

THE BAIT held out to industry by the NRA program was the bait of price agreements and a certain practical modification of the anti-trust laws.

To this tendency some Senators, particularly Borah and Nye, have made such strenuous objection on the ground that price agreements might squash "the little fellow" in business that many prophets here are sure that price provisions in the codes will gradually be faded out.

WHAT THEN does industry as a whole gain by the NRA?

This is the question on the minds of industrial leaders.

They have more and more governmental interference in their business.

They have shorter hours.

They have higher wages.

And if prices are not protected the old game of nibbling down prices will be carried on by the "little fellows."

If industry sees this outcome ahead it must either do what it has done—wobble along with no united front, or else organize into some shape capable of presenting a united resistance to measures which are considered to be or are in fact working toward destruction.

With government bureaucracy organized, labor organized, some semblance of consumer organization, industry itself remains a scattered band of sheep without a shepherd and certainly without a collie.

THERE IS, it is felt among thoughtful observers here, no patriotism in urging industry not to organize if organization means the preservation of industry as against the hazards of Washington going wholesale into the ownership and management of all the production facilities of government.

On the contrary not only patriotism but justice and common sense may require the united front of industry.

That united front may appear after the massing of the industrial representatives on March 4.

JONES, POLICE MAGISTRATE, DIES AT 62

Veteran G.O.P. Leader Widely Known In City

Thomas D. Jones, police magistrate and Republican political leader for many years, died in his home at 936 Industry street early today after an 11-day illness of bronchial pneumonia. He was 62.

Born in the old Birmingham section, Jones had resided on the Hill Top for the past 30 years. After leaving school Mr. Jones became a journeyman printer. He worked in job shops and for various labor papers. His first position in public life was as a school director at the Allen School. He served in old Select Council, after which he was a bond clerk in the District Attorney's office for more than a decade.

Jones resigned that position to accept an appointment as Magistrate at Police Station No. 1 during the last year of former Mayor Charles H. Kline's first administration. During Kline's second term Jones presided at Morals Court. After Mayor McNair assumed office, he was retained as a magistrate and moved to Police Station No. 12.

Mr. Jones was a musician since early youth. He conducted his own group of musicians and at one time was a member of the famous Great Western Band and other Pittsburgh bands.

One of the best figure callers at the old-time square dances, he appeared in this capacity up until several years ago.

LONG IN POLITICS

Active in politics for more than 35 years, he has been Republican ward chairman for the past 10 years. He has been alderman in the Eighteenth Ward for almost a score of years.

Mr. Jones was a member of Franklin Lodge, F. & A. M., Pennsylvania Consistory; Pittsburgh Commandery No. 1, Knights Templar, and Syria band. He was a member of Warrington Avenue M. E. Church.

Surviving are his widow, Elizabeth (Fischer) Jones, and a married daughter, Mrs. Albert McCoy.

The swimming pool at Warrington avenue playground is named after him.

M'NAIR'S PRESS RULING DEFIED

In spite of a standing invitation from Mayor McNair to newspaper reporters to walk into Council's secret budget sessions at any time, the scribes have been told to stay out by the chairman of the finance committee.

Penetrating the sacred precincts of the conference room for a few moments yesterday when the Mayor went in to tell Council of the increasing menace of a flood, the reporters prepared to stay, as McNair has assured them it was his conference room and they were welcome.

Their visions of listening to something important were rudely dashed, however, as Chairman P. J. McArdle said:

"You know very well it's not allright for you to stay."

Council has not yet balanced the budget.

UTILITY STRIKE THREATENED

MILWAUKEE, March 3.—(AP.)—Strikes which would force a shutdown of Milwaukee's public transportation, light and illuminating gas services will begin at 4 a. m. Monday if a direct appeal to President Roosevelt for intervention fails to bring results.

The strikes, involving the city's two large public utilities, were voted early today at meetings attended by union employes of the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company and the Milwaukee Coke and Gas Company. Recognition of newly organized federal unions and higher wages are demanded.

Similar demands by industrial workers have resulted in nearly a dozen strikes at factories in Milwaukee, Kenosha, Racine, Beaver Dam and Sheboygan. More than 6,000 wage earners have left their jobs in the five cities.

CITY INSURANCE BOOST URGED

Mayor McNair's committee on insurance has urged Council to increase coverage from $1,774,800, costing $43,644 for three years, to $5,059,850, costing $61,257 for three years.

McNair accompanied the committee before Council, where their report was submitted by J. Sherman Campbell, chairman. With the group was William B. Foster, city assessor, who has been advising the Mayor on where to place the business.

The Mayor said:

"Mr. Foster has a list of agents who will turn back quite a bit of the premiums in delinquent taxes. I also think members of the committee who have worked on the investigation should receive consideration."

The committee advised dropping $100,000 insurance on the Exposition Building and insuring the contents. The new insurance figures were based on eliminating fire hazards in city buildings. Other members of the committee are Frank S. Kauffman, W. Kenneth McKnight, David L. Lawrence and Henderson E. McKelvey.

M'NAIR BOOSTS SMITH PLAN

City Council could balance the city budget so that it would not be necessary to borrow or provide new sources of taxation if the recommendations of Mrs. R. Templeton Smith were carried out, Mayor McNair told the Allegheny County League of Women Voters yesterday. The Mayor told the women that he is satisfied with his cabinet, but dissatisfied with the meter tax proposal, and annoyed by the civil service. Of the meter tax he said:

"It is only ordinary ecomic law that excepting economic rent tax burdens at the bottom are destined to be shifted to the consumer."

Cabinet members have a free hand and "will serve the city well in their jobs."

DECISION NEAR IN SEIM FIGHT

Final arguments in the Braddock Burgess contest were heard by Judge Frank P. Patterson and George V. Moore late yesterday. They will give a decision later as to whether Fred Seim, Democrat, remains as Burgess, or is unseated by James H. Rose, Republican.

The hearings, begun a month ago, were interrupted by Judge Moore sitting for a week in the Mull murder case, after which Judge Patterson sat for two weeks in the Soles murder case.

Seim was returned the winner by 20 votes at the November election. Rose contends he should win by three votes. He says he should be credited with 13 votes cast for James Rose on the Prohibition ticket and 10 no party votes cast for James Rose. When Rose said he was the only James Rose in Braddock the Seim faction produced a Negro of that name. Rose countered with the challenge that the address given by the Negro was a vacant lot. The court ordered pictures taken of the address. These showed a vacant lot.

was greeted with boos and jeers.

Paul Howlett, acting president of the New Kensington local of the union, said the offer of the company was no increase. The offer provided an 11 per cent hourly wage increase based on wage schedules effective August 1.

CITES CODE RAISES

Howlett said that since August 1, under the temporary NRA code for the aluminum workers, the company had been compelled to raise most of the wages approximately 11 per cent over the August 1 schedules.

Howlett took charge of last night's meeting after A. R. Buller, of LaGrange, Ill., chairman of the National Council of Aluminum Workers' Union, was howled down. He also will preside at the meeting scheduled for today.

The pickets were orderly as they marched near the plants at New Kensington, Arnold and Logans Ferry. Their number swelled to several hundred. Salaried workers were advised not to enter.

Weather Conditions.

Pressure is relatively high over the South Atlantic states (Miami, 30.18), and over the plateau (Boise, Idaho, 30.28), while a trough of low pressure extends from Manitoba (Winnipeg, 29.42), southward over the plains to the Texas Panhandle. Weather continues cloudy over most of the country east of the Rocky Mountains, with light winds and much fog over the central valleys and with rains continuing over the southern lakes, the Ohio Valley and southward to the gulf, and scattered rains over the Mississippi Valley and plains states. Rainfall has been light to moderate, except in portions of Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana. It is warmer east of the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic coast, and colder over the Canadian Northwest and in the plateau region.

River Conditions.

Rainfall over the district during the last 24 hours was light. The weather was warm, however, causing a rapid melting of the snow cover. The snow is now practically all gone, except for drifts and in some mountain sections. There has been no change in the ice conditions since yesterday morning, and there are no indications that the ice will move in the next 24 hours. PLOT ON ARMY PLANES PROBED

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The Army Air Corps is investigating reports of alleged attempts to damage Army planes carrying the air mail, it is learned.

As a result, armed soldiers have been stationed at various flying fields.

The investigation was ordered by Maj. Gen. B. D. Foulois, chief of the air corps. The reports have also been called to the attention of President Roosevelt.

When the inquiry is completed, Foulois' report, expected early next week, will be given to President Roosevelt.

At the same time, the Army is checking on reports that efforts have been made to prevent commercial pilots from taking temporary jobs in the Army flying the mail.

About 90 per cent of the commercial pilots are Army reserve fliers. Foulois is anxious to give them jobs during the emergency period.

CITY WORKERS TO KEEP JOBS

Good news for the harassed city payroll has come from City Council.

To prevent the wholesale firing of city employes in the economy program, Council has passed a resolution which would stagger work throughout the payroll.

The action would cancel numerous dismissals, already made by Pubic Works Director Leslie M. Johnston. The depression is cited as reason for the action.

Council yesterday, after calling representatives of the Civil Service Commission into conference, passed a resolution favoring the staggering of work and employment among the total number of employes provided in the salary ordinance.

This means that where a number of employes have been dismissed by department heads they will be recalled and the work divided among all the workers through a furlough arrangement.

Cadogan Strikers Returning to Work

More than 300 men who went on strike at the Cadogan mine of the Allegheny River Mining Company near Ford City were to return to work today, officials of the company reported. The dispute, it was said, arose over a new wage system and not over the wage scale, officials declared.

CITY PLEAD FOR CWA FUNDS HERE

City and county officials today were planning to ask Federal CWA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins for earmarked allotments of funds to guarantee completion of projects in the county before May 1.

The officials have been advised by County Administrator James L. Stuart that he has no authority to earmark money to complete the projects.

Officials said that if the CWA program ends before completion of the county projects it will be necessary to use local funds to pay the thousands of men now under the CWA authority.

New Yorker Fights Pittsburgh Tax Levy

An appeal from the assessment of the E. Brook property at Margaretta street and Euclid avenue from the levy of the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes, with notice to City Solicitor Thomas A. Scully, was filed in Common Pleas Court.

The realtor, a resident of New York, avers that the land and building are assessed at $60,510, that the building is assessed at $55,000 and is more than 40 years old and that the property is operated at a loss of $2,025.

Huey Debates Thomas On Capitalism Doom

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—Opponents in a debate, Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, and Norman Thomas last night engaged in a battle of words that amused as well as instructed their audience.

The subject was "Capitalism Is Doomed and Cannot Now Be Saved by a Redistribution of Wealth."

Senator Long, with frequent references to the Bible, said it could; Thomas, many time candidate for President on the Socialist ticket, said it couldn't.

Thomas, speaking frequently of the "tragedy" he believes inherent in capitalism, said:

"Socialism is the answer to the technological and scientific requirements of today. It must cross racial and national lines. It discriminates against no race. Its final triumph will be the shared abundance of a fellowship of free men, the federated co-operative commonwealths of mankind."

Senator Long opened his remarks with the statement:

"I'm not going to be presumptious enough to comment upon Mr. Thomas' address. After I understand it, the first chance I get I'll write him back a letter."

Quick Change in State Constitution Urged

By DAVID JONES
Staff Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, March 3.—If there ever was a time that the 60-year-old Constitution of Pennsylvania needed changing, it is now, Deputy Attorney General Harold D. Saylor, of Pennsylvania, told three score leaders in Pennsylvania's economic circles at the opening of a two-day conference on local government here last night.

Saylor, presiding at the opening of the Philadelphia conference on government, declared that whether the Constitution is changed or not, there soon will be a departure from its stipulations, either by amendment or by judicial agreement.

He declared that the voters of the state should forget trying to modernize the Constitution through amendments and get down to the real business of complete revision through a constitutional convention.

Saylor praised the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph for the campaign it is waging against waste and duplication in governmental agencies. He voiced the hope that other newspapers would help in the battle for tax reduction.

W. Brooke Graves, professor of economics and political science at Temple University, presided at the meeting held last night. In outlining the objects of the conference he made pain that it would be mainly for discussion of ways and means of bringing about a new Constitution.

MILE-A-MINUTE RATE TOLD AT PROBE

Train Derailed Before Hitting Switch, Says Superintendent

A graphic picture of the giant locomotive leaping from the rails as it swept around a curve at a mile-a-minute speed was drawn today by C. E. Adams, superintendent of the Panhandle Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad and one of the first of the railroad officials on the scene of the wreck, before the board of inquiry sitting on the fatal wreck.

Adams expressed the opinion that the locomotive, traveling at a speed between 50 and 60 miles an hour, hurtled from the rails and turned over as it approached the switch leading into the D. L. Clark Company siding. He said marks on the ties leading into the switch and the overhanging springs on the trailer truck beneathe the locomtive cab indicated the locomotive had trailed along the ties in advance of the switch point.

DESCRIBES MARKS

The locomotive, to make such marks, he declared, would have to be at an agle of 45 degrees. Forging ahead at a high speed and turned at that angle, Adams declared the locomotive tore out the switch mechanism at the side of the tracks, leaving the switch points free so that the cars following took the switch into the Clark siding instead of going down the main track. Practically all the switch mechanism was destroyed, he said.

D. E. Callahan, superintendent of tracks, told the board that apparently the engine had leaped from the rails before reaching the switch. He said that the switch points were undamaged and that there were no marks on the frog points.

DEATH TOLL GROWS

A statement from C. W. Nee, baggagemaster on the train, whose injuries were too serious to permit him to attend the hearing, expressed belief that the train was traveling between 50 and 60 miles an hour. He said that he observed no application of brakes and that he did not hear an emergency signal to slow downt he train given.

The death of Alexand Ray, 40, of Cleveland, in the Allegheny General Hospital from injuries suffered in the werck, swelled the death list to 11.

The board of inquiry, made up of Interstate Commerce Commission investigators, a representative of the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission, the Allegheny County Coroner's office and officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is sitting in the Pennsylvania Station.

4 DEAD AS FIRE RAZES HOTEL

WORCESTER, Mass., March 3.—(AP.)—Four men were burned to death, and a dozen people injured in a fire which destroyed the Hotel Pleasant this morning with a loss of $100,000.

At least 10 persons were saved by firemen or escaped down rope fire escapes. Many of those rescued were elderly. They were carried down swaying ladders while other victims leaned from windows screaming for their turn.

The fire, origin yet undetermined, started in an elevator well. For a time it menaced a church, within 50 feet of it, and an apartment block, separated from it only by a three-foot alley.

POISON FATAL IN LABORATORY

Slipping into the laboratory of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company plant, Preble avenue, where he had been employed as a chemist, Victor Belack, 30, of 50 Doerr street, Woods Run, swallowed poison last night and died a short time later in St. John's Hospital, according to homicide detectives.

Because of the plant's idleness, Belack was assigned to a job caring for heating stoves. He appeared in a jovial mood when he reported off duty late yesterday, Frank F. Heagy, the watchman, told Detective James O'Kane.

Less than three hours later Heagy found Belack seated in a chair in the laboratory, with a note and an empty glass on the desk. Heagy summoned police.

Investigation revealed, O'Kane said, that Belack had taken the deadliest of the poisons and acids on the laboratory shelves. His note read:

"So long, all my friends whoever they may be. Thanks to whoever they are. VIC."

PASTORS FIGHT SUNDAY SHOWS

MONONGAHELA, Pa., March 3.—(AP.)—Members of the Ministerial Association today moved to block a projected showing of Sunday motion pictures in a Monongahela theater.

The Rev. A. Clair King, pastor of the First Baptist Church and president of the association, asserted he would make public resolutions opposing the shows in the event the theater manager, Bernard H. Buchheit, fails to call off the proposed performance.

A motion picture passion play was given in the theater last Sunday as a benefit performance.

This week, the ministers say, advertisements appeared for a continuous showing of pictures from 2 to 11 p. m. tomorrow. Mr. Clair said he asked Mayor S. C. Stahlman and Manager Buchheit for a conference yesterday, but was informed they had been called out of town.

Suction Light Trap To Catch Beetles In Warehouse

WASHINGTON, — (INS.) — Let there be light and the bug will be caught!

At least that will be the situation of the cigaret beetle when he encounters the new suction light traps developed by the Department of Agriculture.

The trap, to be hung in tobacco warehouses, is a wire cone with an electric light and a fan. The beetle sees the light, goes toward it, and is sucked into the cone, says the report. "The average weekly catch is likely to exceed 150,000 beetles per trap."

M'ELROY JOKES AT THREATS

KANSAS CITY, March 3.—(AP.)—A death note demanding $25,000 brought from City Manager H. F. McElroy today a smiling assertion that extortionists have "gone on NRA prices."

Disclosing that he has received a series of such notes since he bought his daughter, Mary, back from kidnapers last year, the city manager said the extortionists have been boosting the ante.

He said:

"The last note before this one demanded only $10,000. It looks as though the cranks who write such letters have gone on NRA prices."

McElroy, who ransomed his daughter for $30,000 and later saw Walter McGee, leader of the kidnap band, sentenced to die, was undismayed by the note, although it threatened his death.

A smile was his only answer to suggestions of friends that he seek police protection.

BOYS ON STAND IN DEATH TRIAL

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 3.—(AP.)—The prostrated widow and two schoolboys, one barely able to speak English, were among an array of witnesses the state sent to the stand yesterday in the trial of Frank Romano, of Pittsburgh, charged with the murder of Benjamin Oliver, of Yorkville.

Mrs. Minnie Oliver, after testifying her husband always carried a revolver while mayor of the little steel town in southern Jefferson County, broke down as she identified clothing worn by Oliver on the night he was slain.

She said her husband's life never had been threatened, however.

The state put Milo Sikovich, 15, and Tasso Nickas, 10, on the stand, but defense objections removed the Nickas boy, a native of Greece, who has been in this country only six months.

The state claims the boys heard the shot and saw the killers' car speed away after Oliver fell.

Woman Gas Victim Revived by Firemen

East Pittsburgh firemen early today saved the life of Mrs. William Hunter, 28, overcome by gas fumes in her home, 542 Center street, East Pittsburgh. The firemen worked for an hour with an inhalator to revive her.

Police said they believed she attempted to take her life by opening a gas jet.

BRIDE ARRESTED IN SLAYING

BOSTON, March 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Norma Brighton Millen, 19-year-old bride of Murton Millen, one of three men accused of the holdup of the Needham Trust Company and the slaying of two policemen a month ago today, was arrested last night at the State House charged with being an accessory after the fact. Bail was set at $50,000 and state police said she would be taken to Dedham Jail.

She was the second woman to be taken into custody during the day in the case. Earlier Miss Rose Knellar, attractive 23-year-old fiancee of Abraham Faber, who is also held, was detained while police investigated any connection she might have had with the affair.

Federal City Bond Loans Proposed

A proposal whereby cities, including Pittsburgh, would call in their present bonds, upon which interest is paid, and put them up as collateral for a federal loan at negligible interest was advocated by Matthew McNeill, land value expert, at a luncheon of the Henry George Club in the Chamber of Commerce.

He termed the plan similar to that of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which came to the assistance of banks and railroads during the administration of President Hoover.

Aged Woman Rallies To Face Further Grilling

for as she left the courtroom yesterday she reiterated her intentions of "going through with it."

She said she wasn't "afraid" of the prosecutor, who yesterday severely placed her through all of the legal tricks at his command to trap her in her story and whom she faces again today.

To reporters she said:

"I'm not afraid of Mr. Dougherty's attempts to impeach my perfectly sincere testimony."

She begged not to be asked any questions by the press, saying:

"I feel very exhausted. But I'm not nervous."

It appeared today that Dr. Wynekoop's fate will be placed in the hands of the jury on Monday.

ATTORNEY DISPLEASED

Her testimony yesterday, although dramatic in effect, was apparently not pleasing in delivery to her counsel, Milton Smith. In a weak, dispirited voice she spoke the lines which defense counsel had counted upon to score heavily with the jury. They represented her cry of innocence.

The moment was a big one in the strange case when Defense Counsel Smith put the question to her.

"Did you kill Rheta Wynekoop?"

Here was her opportunity to fairly shout out her innocence, but she didn't rise to the occasion. She replied weakly in a hollow voice as she sat half prone in the chair, her chin resting on her left hand:

"No, I did not."

Her testimony achieved its highest point when she told of finding the body of her daughter-in-law in the operating room at the Wynekoop residence. She said:

"It was a picture of death."

SAW BODY ON TABLE

She said she had gone to the basement to get some medicine for Miss Enid Hennessy, school teacher who resided at the Wynekoop home.

"When I switched on the lights, I saw Rheta on the operating table. Her body was covered with a blanket, her head mostly exposed. There were a few drops of blood on the cloth. She apparently was lying in a very stiff position. I saw the chloroform bottle and the pistol at her head. I stood for a little while. Then I walked around the table. Then I noticed the peculiar color of Rheta's face."

Here she paused in her gruesome recital, visibly affected.

"I can't describe it. It was a picture of death."

ST. LOUIS, March 3.—(AP.)—Believed distraught by fear his five sisters and three brothers were being persecuted in Germany, Dr. Ernst Jonas, 62, distinguished St. Louis surgeon, ended his life by plunging from the seventeenth floor of an apartment building here.

Dr. Jonas, a member of the staff of Jewish Hospital and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, came to St. Louis from Berlin in 1900 and for 12 years was associate professor of surgery at Washington University.

PUNCHING THUG SUSPECT HELD

A reputed gunman who, police said, depended on his right fist, was scheduled for a hearing in North Side Police Court today on a charge of robbery.

Jack Forman, 31, of 110 East North Diamond street, was captured late yesterday after, police reported, he struck two men and robbed one in the Norton Service Station, 216 Anderson street.

Carrying a revolver in his left hand, Forman used his right fist to strike J. Berman, the proprietor, of 1255 Morningside avenue, and C. M. Mers, a Duquesne Light Company collector, of 525 East End avenue, according to police. He fled with $12 taken from Mers' pocket, police reported.

Patrolman James Hickey and a radio car crew captured Forman two blocks distant. Hickey fired a shot in the air before halting Forman, he said.

BROKEN MAINS FLOOD STREETS

Broken water mains in the uptown and South Side districts last night flooded streets without causing any damage.

A broken main in the 1600 block in Fifth avenue uprooted bricks in the middle of the street and necessitated roping off the street. Automobile traffic was interrupted for an hour.

Pennsylvania Railroad property near the South Thirtieth street yards was the scene of the other broken main.

Notables to See Granddaughter Of 'T. R.' Marry

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., March 3.—(AP.)—A flurry quickened the slow tempo of this little Long Island village today.

A Roosevelt, of the Republican Roosevelts, was being married.

She is Miss Grace Green Roosevelt, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, and granddaughter of the hard-riding, trust-busting President. To the natives, she is "Miss Gracie."

The bridegroom is William McMillan, of Baltimore, son of the late Hugh McMillan, of Detroit, and Mrs. William Dent Wise.

Among those who accepted invitations to the wedding in Christ Church were Mrs. Nicholas Longworth ("Princess Alice" of the White House), Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. August Belmont, Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay.

And, of course, there were the Roosevelts, the bride's father and mother, her two grandmothers, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Sr., and Mrs. Henry A. Alexander; Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt and their children, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Derby (she was Ethel Roosevelt) and Mr. and Mrs. Archibald B. Roosevelt.

Nine-year-old Paulina Longworth, daughter of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, was selected as flower girl.

MEADVILLE MAN SLAIN IN DARK

MEADVILLE, Pa., March 3.—(AP.)—With startling suddenness four bullets were fired through an open door. Three of them struck Roy Sugar, 28, and he was killed instantly.

The shots were fired at the home of the dead man's father, James Sugar. Police are at a loss as to the motive for the slaying.

Sugar had gone to the home of his father early last evening. A knock sounded on a rear door. As the youth opened the door, four shots sounded. Two bullets entered Sugar.

Friends told police they are unable to explain the sudden attack upon Sugar, a Meadville fruit dealer.

Accused of Slaying Girl, Mother Dies

LE CENTER, Minn., March 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Anna Budke, 56, charged with slaying her 17-year-old daughter, Alma, died in her cell in jail here as she awaited a second trial following a jury disagreement.

The daughter was found dead in bed last October 1, a victim of poisoning. Her mother, seriously ill, also had been poisoned but was believed to have recovered.

ADMITS SLAYING SCOTTDALE BOY AND FRIEND

Beaten Victims Placed On Railroad Tracks, Run Over by Train

HORACE, Kan., March 3.—(AP.)—Prosecuting Attorney Martin F. Trued said Albert Stamback confessed last night he, with another man, killed Clarence Dehl, of Scottdale, Pa., and John Meader, of Canton, O., July 15, 1932, by knocking them unconscious and letting a train run over them.

He named Miles (Steamboat) Ware as the other man.

BELIEVED ACCIDENT

The decapitated bodies of the two youths, who had hitch-hiked their way to Kansas in search of work, were found in the Missouri Pacific yards here July 16 by railroad men. Investigators concluded that they had fallen asleep with their heads on the rail and had been killed accidentally.

Trued said that Stamback confessed while being questioned relative to the slaying of C. C. Lavoo, locomotive engineer, at Horace in December, 1932.

Stamback was quoted as saying that he and Ware encountered the two youths at night in the railroad yards, engaged them in a quarrel, beat them into unconsciousness, then dragged their bodies to the railroad tracks. Ware, according to the alleged confession, robbed one of the youths of a finger ring.

The parents of Dehl and Meader came here from the East and remained for a few weeks but learned nothing which indicated other than accidental deaths.

HUSBAND KILLS WIFE, SELF

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 3.—(AP.)—Rushing into the home of his estranged wife last night brandishing a pistol, Telford Young, 35, shot her to death, critically wounded his sister-in-law and then fired a bullet into his own head.

The wife, Mrs. Fay Young, 22, formerly of Rich Creek, Va., died instantly of a bullet wound in the head. Young then turned the gun on his sister-in-law, Miss Dolly Smith, 19, also of Rich Creek. Shooting her twice, he then killed himself.

The two women were shot as they talked in the bedroom of their home in the downtown section of Charleston. Police said Young and his wife had been estranged for months.

MAN IDENTIFIED BY O'CONNELL

ALBANY, March 3.—(AP.)—The identification by John J. O'Connell of Manney Strewl as one of his captors, despite previously undenied reports that his eyes had been tightly bandaged while he was held for ransom is only one of the surprises the trial will produce, according to District Attorney John T. Delaney.

Young O'Connell yesterday pointed an accusing finger at Strewl with the dramatic declaration:

"That's the man!"

Strewl, he claimed, had entered the room where O'Connell was handcuffed to a bed last July to discuss an intermediary to conduct ransom negotiations with the O'Connell family.

O'Connell continued:

"I could see under the corner of a bandage over my eyes."

Strewl cried:

"You're a —— liar. I saved your life and you're trying to hang me."

SOMERSET, Pa., March 3.—(AP.)—Said Raymond Williams, 17, to his mother:

Baby Sees Father Kill Mother, Grandmother

DALLAS, Tex., March 3.—(AP.)—Martha Julia Boggess—who is 2 years old and therefore too young to feel the pang of it—saw her mother and grandmothe shot to death.

Her father, Giles S. Boggess, told the police about it last night. He and his wife had been separated since February 7. Yesterday afternoon he took the baby to a relative's home, where his wife was staying, and asked her to come back to him.

He told police:

"I loved that baby. I had begged my wife to come back to me so that we could give the child a good home. My wife refused.

"During this time the baby had been sitting in my wife's lap. The baby got out of her lap. Then I pulled out my pistol and shot her. I had been waiting for the baby to move, for I didn't want to hurt her. My wife's mother picked up a stick and started toward me and I shot her."

Boggess then took the baby to the home of a nephew, where he was arrested. It was his intention to kill himself, he said. He added:

"But on second thought I wanted to live long enough to make sure what was going to happen to my baby girl. I wanted her raised right."

Dr. Dickey Gets Plans For County Spelling Bee

Dr. C. E. Dickey, county superintendent of schools, returned from Harrisburg today with plans for Allegheny County's old-fashioned spelling bee, which are to be announced within a few days.

Inaugurated yesterday, the "bee" will be sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. The county spell-down" will be part of state-wide contest held by the Department of Public Instruction in Harrisburg.

The Sun-Telegraph will send the county's best speller to the capital April 4 to compete in the state finals. The final event will be held in the forum of the State Education Building.

Persons eligible to compete are adults not now in school or college as students or teachers. Dr. Dickey will conduct the county contest and select the list of words to be used. Many of them are to be published in the Sun-Telegraph.

The "bee" is to be part of the public school centennial celebration marking the founding of the public schools in Pennsylvania in 1834.

Details of the contest will be announced next week.

20 DENOMINATIONS TO DISCUSS CHURCH MERGERS

GROUP TO MEET MARCH 20 IN HARRISBURG

HARRISBURG, March 3.—(AP.)—A group, representing 20 denominations, will pore over a religious map of the state in Harrisburg March 20 and study means of merging churches in the interests of economy and improved religious service.

They comprise the commission on comity of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches and it is their task to work out preliminary steps to consolidations.

10,000 CHURCHES

Pennsylvania has more than 10,000 Protestant churches and nearly as many pastors serving 2,700,000 communicants.

Dr. William L. Mudge, executive secretary of the council, says the church map shows a surprising waste.

Dr. Mudge said a number of Pennsylvania churches have been consolidated in the last two decades and that the plan is "unusually successful."

20 IN MOVEMENT

The comity commission includes representatives of these denominations:

Reformed, African Methodist Episcopal, African Methodist Episcopal Zion, Baptist, Churches of God, Congregational, Christian, Evangelical, Friends (Orthodox), Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Protestant, Moravian, Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal, Reformed Episcopal, Mennonite, United Brethren, United Brethren (Old Constitution), United Lutheran and United Presbyterian.

NUNS TO HAVE PENTHOUSE

A penthouse convent, said to be the first in this county, is being planned for nuns of the parochial school of Sacred Heart Church, East End, the architects, Kaiser, Neal and Reid announced today.

The proposed school and convent, estimated to cost $450,000, will be located in Emerson street. Work will start as soon as the parish property in Center avenue, now used for a convent and school is disposed of.

Thirty rooms for the nuns will be built on the top of the new building, 250 feet in length, all 65 feet above ground. There will be a promenade 500 feet long.

The Story of David -:- CHAPTER XVIII -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

For 40 years after his return to Jerusalem, Absalom, son of David, did everything he could to win the favor of those who came to the king for judgment; and so he stole the hearts of the men of Israel. Learning of Absalom's conspiracy, David fled to a place afar off, leaving 10 of his concubines in the king's house. Then the conspirators spread a tent for Absalom upon the top of the house, and he went in unto his father's concubines.

While the men with Absalom made war against King David's men, the mule on which Absalom rode went under an oak, and Absalom's hair caught in the branches and the mule ran away and there Absalom was slain.

Later two sons borne to Saul by Rizpah and five grandsons of Saul were hanged upon a hill; but Rizpah stood guard over their bodies and suffered neither birds to go near them by day, nor beasts by night. (Continued next week)

ENTEN SERMONET POINTS TO SACRIFICES OF SAVIOR

Rev. O. E. Krueger Tells Meaning Of Cross

The Rev. O. E. Krueger of the Temple Baptist Church, Mt. Oliver, presents today the first of a series of Lenten sermons to be published weekly in the Sun-Telegraph under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Council of Churches. The sermonets are to be written by representative ministers of the Pittsburgh district. The sermonet for today is "The Brother for Whom Christ Died," Cor. 8 :11.

We cannot readily understand the personal value of Christ's sacrifice and our individual share in it until we come to take it for granted that He would have willingly died even if there had been only one person in all the world, no matter how unworthy that person might have been. Paul felt that when he said: "He loved me and gave himself for me."

The consciousness that Jesus had come not only to live, but also to die for His weak brethren, strengthened Him in the hour of His soul's distress when He was tempted to pray: "Father, save me from this hour."

Jesus had that prayer under consideration, but He never uttered it. Its answer would have defeated the purpose of His coming. Resolutely He went forth into the darkness of that hour that He might change the bitterest thing in the world, the Cross, into the best thing ever given to man, the manifestation of the love of God.

Paul was grieved at the way in which the "strong" Christians at Corinth were using the privileges of Christian freedom regardless of the havoc it wrought among the "weak." Since Christ had made the supreme sacrifice of giving His life for the unscrupulous brother, He himself would make the minor sacrifice of foregoing the pleasure of eating meat offered to idols.

Just at this point He reveals the meaning of the Christian's cross. Among the millions who sing: "In the Cross of Christ I Glory" there are only a very few who glory in their own cross. This cross is not a symbol of our aches and ills, but of our self-denial and suffering for His cause, even for our weak brother for whom Christ died.

NOVELIST CITES TEXT PROJECT IDEALISM

Charles G. Norris, American novelist, yesterday, joined the groups enrolling in the movement to aid the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission obtain an inscription for the heroic monument it is building in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Norris declared the project was animated by superb idealism and would enlist the widest kind of interest everywhere.

Members of Congress, Army and Navy officers and teachers of the faculties of the leading universities are adding their voices in support of the proposed national competition to assist the memorial commission in finding a suitable inscription for the monument.

Gutzon Borglum, famous sculptor, is planning to engrave six hundred words of text on the cenotaph.

On one side of the mountain he has started colossal figures of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt.

The inscription will be lettered on the opposite side of the peak in letters 13 feet high. It will deal with nine episodes connected with the birth and development of the nation.

Among these are the writing of the Declaration of Independence; the drafting of the Constitution; the purchase of Louisiana, and the ceding of the Floridas to the United States.

Others are the rise of the Republic of Texas and its entry to the Union as a state; the Mexican War and the acquisition of California; the settlement of the Oregon boundary dispute, and the building of the Panama Canal.

It is for these happenings that the text for the inscription are being sought by the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission.

Fred W. Sargent, of Chicago, chairman of the Memorial Commission, is receiving messages about the proposed competition from all parts of the country.

The Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers are carrying information about the project daily, and will print a detailed exposition of it tomorrow.

Head of Family Defined in Law Taxing Incomes

This is the sixth of a series of articles explaining the proper procedure in making out income tax returns.

A head of a family is defined by income tax regulations as an individual who actually supports and maintains in one household one or more persons who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage, or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependent individuals is based on some moral or legal obligation. The exemption allowed a head of a family is $2,500.

The phrase "in one household" may be interpreted as meaning the taxpayer's personal residence, an apartment, rooms in a boarding house or in a hotel.

Under certain circumstances it is not necessary that the taxpayer and his dependents live under one roof during the entire taxable year for the taxpayer to claim exemption as a head of a family. If the parent is away on business or a child away at school or on a visit, the exemption is allowed.

If a parent is obliged to maintain his children with relatives or in a boarding house, while he lives elsewhere, the exemption still applies. If, however, without necessity, the dependent makes his home elsewhere, the benefactor is not the head of the family for tax purposes.

The same ruling applies to husband and wife "living together." If occasionally and temporarily the husband is away on business or the wife on a visit, the common home being maintained, the $2,500 exemption still applies. The unadvoidable absence of husband or wife at a sanatorium does not preclude the exemption. But if a husband continuously makes his home at one place and the wife at another, they are not living together within the meaning of the act and may not claim exemption as married persons.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

OMAHA, Neb., March 3.

The Army is handling the mail very sensibly now. I left New York at 2 a. m. arrived Chicago at 6 a. m. Weather in and around Chicago was bad, they held us there till noon. No mail in or out. You see both Army and commercial are very careful.

Talked to Gen. Westover, in charge of all Army fliers, and Col. Hickam, of Chicago area, they said they were taking no chances. (Some banker may lose a day's interest on his checks, but that's the worst can happen.)

And what about the fliers, and the old buck privates, some of whom draw only $21 a month, and have been moved away off up here from their posts.

They want some money. They are eating and sleeping on credit, and living off the generosity of the towns they are in. So hurry up and get busy, Congress, and straighten the whole thing out. All of you say you want too. Well, then do it.

Salt Lake at midnight, Beverly for breakfast. Yours,

WILL.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It's going to take more than a blizzard or a snowstorm to smother the "Signs of Spring Department."

Though all the heavy weather signs of spring have been struggling for attention.

Zoe Sesseben, Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg, has the first butterfly. It had just emerged from its cocoon, when Zoe captured it. The butterfly is six inches across. Any more butterflies that emerge in this weather are going to find the going pretty rough.

Mrs. Frank D. Rohmer says the robbins are still chirping up at Midland, Pa. So says Marion Kuhn about Mt. Lebanon.

Mrs. William T., McKeesport—You better take your problem of apartments over garages up with the Health Director of McKeesport.

The story of the Johnstown Flood stirred memories within Mrs. Elizabeth McCafferty, of Verona. Her aunt and uncle were saved from the flood waters, although their parents were drowned. She reports that the bodies of those two were found near the Point in Pittsburgh.

I don't understand "chain" letters. I get them every now and then and they puzzle me. They are weird and portentous. Nobody ever signs them which makes me feel that the sender, in spite of all the solemn thought expressed in the letter feels a little foolish while he writes it.

Schoolmarms Off Penner For Life

I would advise parents and others prone to deplore the paucity of radio influence on education, to consider the situation in Syracuse, N. Y.

School teachers there, I am told, lately have suffered mild hysteria traceable to avid radio listening by their pupils.

The first of these was a young woman who was reading to her class about Columbus. When she disclosed the date of America's discovery, a strident-voiced youngster, evidently a Joe Penner fan, cried out naively:

"Izzat so?"

This led a bolder and less consistent youngster to demand of the teacher whether she might consider the purchase of a duck.

Before she could answer, a third advised:

"Don't ever do that!"

The teacher's resentment led to a survey which revealed that citations from various comedy programs were rife in all the city's schools.

On the grounds that duck salesmanship is somewhat incongruous at school, the board of education issued an edict banning utterance of any excerpt from a comedy radio program inside the walls of its schoolhouses.

Mimicry of radio clowns, so it is said, reached such a point in Syracuse that the minute a teacher in any class happened to cite a physical fact which might challenge credulity, a mighty student chorus would boom out the question:

"Vass you dere, teacher?"

And whenever the British King who brought about the Boston tea party was mentioned, his name was invariably greeted with lusty shouts of:

"You nasthy man!"

If letters don't lie, Prudence Penny's prize recipe column is being sought as eagerly by thousands of housewives as the children in their families turn to the Sun-Telegraph comics. They've found the column has something good to offer them, and they're certainly quick to take advantage of the proffered help.

Short letters, long letters, come in, praising the contest and wishing it a long, long life. After all, in a contest of the proportions of the recipe contest there are bound to be mistakes now and then.

The contest has been helping you; you, in turn, can help Prudence Penny by sending in your best recipes to her, in care of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Every day she awards one $5 prize and 10 $1 prizes to the recipes received. No recipes, as she's told you before, are returned.

MRS. J. LANDAU,
7430 Ben Hur street.
HUNGARIAN VERENICKAS.

Put one cup of grits into a skillet with about one tablespoonful of chicken lard or butter. Brown for about 10 minutes and add sufficient water to make a light paste of approximately waffle-dough consistency.

Now boil until about the consistency of cereal, adding water if necessary to keep boiling for about 10 or 12 minutes. Salt to taste while boiling.

Cut some onions very fine and brown them lightly in chicken lard or butter, adding a little salt and pepper. Now mix with the boiled grits, adding now chicken cracklings chopped fine. This finishes the grits.

Make dough as for noodles, but slightly softer. Use one egg if desired. Roll out to about 1-16-inch thick. Cut into shape with glass. Fill with grits, fold over, and paste the ends. Boil in salted water for at least 25 minutes.

Now put into skillet with butter or chicken lard for a few minutes and mix thoroughly. Then put in oven for about 10 minutes (moderate heat).

MUSCULAR RHEUMATIC PAINS

IT takes more than a salve to draw them out. It takes a "counter-irritant"! And that's what good old Musterole is—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in drawing out the pain and congestion when rubbed on the sore, aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly to this treatment, and with continued application once an hour, blessed relief is often experienced in five hours.

Even better results than the never-failing old-fashioned mustard plaster. Used by millions of people. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong.

The Private Papers of a Reporter

Stories of retribution are not uncommon—but here are a few dealing with movie folks and others. A few years ago a movie star wearied of a young man—who was not up to her level—professionally . . . She divorced him and married a man—who had a distinguished connection . . . The other day she left her new husband . . . The first husband she divorced is now an author of such distinction he may win one of this year's Pulitzer prizes.

Once there was a vaudeville team called Bard and Pearl, which earned as high as $2,500 a week—they were that funny. . . . Or rather, Jack Pearl was. Anyhow, his partner, Ben Bard, who was the straight man or feeder, decided that he was wasting his time on low-comedy cross-fire, and he split up the combination in order to remain in Hollywood and become a big movie star . . . Jack Pearl had to start all over again, as a single, with a salary one-fifth the size of his former pay check . . . But he persevered and stuck to it and because he was a funny man and couldn't be held down, he worked his way back . . . And past his old mark—until he earned several thousand per week himself . . . So when he went to Hollywood to star in a picture, and his new straight man fell ill, he prevailed upon the producers to give the role to Ben Bard, his former partner. . . . And that was the best job Bard has had since he quit Pearl, seven years ago.

This is small potatoes, perhaps, but it belongs under such a list of retributions . . . A theatrical trade paper reporter had given a sour notice to a scenario writer, who had just quit being a newspaper reporter . . . The new scenarist was with his producer when they encountered the critic, whose wage was as low as a Hollywood trade paper staff man's salary . . . "Well," heckled the newcomer-author to his boss, "how do you ever expect to get any real criticism or real brains out of a $25 a week newspaperman? . . . Those guys never know anything or they wouldn't be where they are!" . . . The critic now has a better job serving a syndicate from the coast and the scenarist is back on a paper getting $25 per.

This story, however, is by way of contrast about a man who "remembered" . . . When B. P. Schulberg was a struggling independent producer, Louis D. Lighton and Hope Loring were top-notch movie writers and they wrote several stories "on the cuff" (for nothing) for Schulberg, who never forgot . . . When he became head of Paramount production he gave them jobs at $1,000 per week . . . Lighton still is a producer there—and owes his break to Schulberg, who owes his first break to Lighton and Hope Loring.

Gloria Swanson, it appears, divorced one of her first husbands so that she might climb to bigger time and not be handicapped by an obscure husband . . . His name happens to be Wallace Beery!

Another married couple, now in Hollywood, were once closer than "f" is to "g" . . . That is—for a whole year—the first of their married career . . . Then she had a chance to go to a certain studio on the coast, and get in a movie, so she took the easiest way to get in solid with the executives . . . Thinking that she was all set—she gave her groom the air—this was just recently. Now that she is no longer a novelty around that lot any more—the boys are beginning to tire of her, and she will soon learn that she is stranded with an unpicked option in her hands.

When the movie companies that William Fox controlled were grabbed from him by a big bank—he took $35,000,000 to salve his woundeed feelings . . . But, anyone will tell you in the industry, that Fox didn't want his company taken from him no matter what he received . . . Since the big, bad banks relieved him of his company, however, they've lost $165,000,000 running it through the depresh.

It appears that someone in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., sent a story to Sam Marx, scenario writer at the Metro studios in Hollywood . . . The letter stated that the city gave to Hollywood such notables as Samuel Hoffenstein, Herman Mankiewicz and Louis Weitzenkorn—and that to continue upholding Wilkes-Barre's reputation, the sender suggested that Metro make a picture based on the life of Irving Berlin . . . He also suggested that if Metro used the idea to send him a nice big juicy check.

Mr. Marx wrote back that the idea would be considered—but in regard to sending him a check, Hollywood would prefer to send back Hoffenstein, Weitzenkorn and Mankiewicz.

This is too good not to print . . . It came in a letter from Arthur Fasulas, of the Y. M. C. A. at 5 West 63rd street N. Y. C. . . . The letter was sent to My Gurl Friday, who had noted recently that her boss was well known in Jugoslavia—according to Louis Adamic's new book . . . "What's new about that?" queries Mr. Fasulas. "He is widely konwn in Greece, too. One of the best daily newspapers in Athens is the Patris, a democratic paper, possessing the largest circulation in Athens—it printed an exclusive column about WW five years ago . . . But about a year or so ago he was mentioned again—when his pal, Mark Hellinger, visited Athens on his tour. This time the paper was a weekly magazine called 'Bouketo' ('Bouquet') and in describing Hellinger's visit he was referred to as a friend of Walter Winchell."

'Wonder Bar' Is Stanley Wonder

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

In the film version of "Wonder Bar," spectacular film in the Stanley, Al Jolson is virtually the whole thing among the individual artists, just as he was in the successful stage extravaganza of the same title. If the picture does the right thing by Al in the way of opportunity Al reciprocates and does a lot for the photoplay, which is representative of the Jolson of other days, when he was the top-notcher among the singing comedians of the musical comedy stage.

However, while Jolson is the leader in everything, he has able support of the stellar cast, especially from Dolores Del Rio and Ricardo Cortez, who play the dramatic leads. Yes, the picture has drama as well as comedy and music and some of the best efforts of Busby Berkeley in the way of sensational production numbers. Hollywood's favorite adjectives, "stupendous" and "colossal," are really applicable in this case. Berkeley really has outdone himself in the staging of the magical background for "Why Do I Dream Those Dreams," sung by Dick Powell and danced by Cortez and Del Rio, and the grandly humorous views of a Negro paradise accompanying Jolson's singing of "Going to Heaven on a Mule."

In "Wonder Bar" Jolson is seen as the proprietor of a cabaret in Paris, in which he also is master of ceremonies and a performer. Cortez and Del Rio are his featured dancers and Powell is his singing orchestra leader. Dolores loves Cortez, who has no time for her, and she is loved by both Al and Dick. Cortez, who also does a little gigoloing, has induced Kay Francis, the wife of a socially prominent man, to give him her diamond necklace. The police are on his trail and scandal threatens. Even murder is committed, but Al, who is Al Wonder in the picture, sees to it that there is no scandal or anything sensational.

Besides good work on the part of those mentioned, there are satisfactory performances by Guy Kibbee, Ruth Donnelly, Hugh Herbert and Louise Fazenda, American married couples out for a good time and having it, and Fifi Dorsay and Merna Kennedy, cabaret hostesses, who interest Guy and Hugh.

A newsreel, "Little Red Hen," comedy in color, and thrills caught by the cameraman, including a dive from the Brooklyn Bridge, complete the program.

Miss Bennett In Dual Role In Penn

By MICHAEL SHAW

"Moulin Rouge," which opened yesterday in the Penn, is a field day for Constance Bennett and may be recommended unreservedly to her admirers. Miss Bennett sings in a deep, attractive voice; she dances, gracefully enough; and she plays two roles, or perhaps even two and a half. In one of these impersonations she is doomed to wear a black wig, and it is only to be hoped she will not do that again.

The picture is a semi-musical backstage affair, and the plot is pretty reminiscent of Molnar's "Guardsman," so magnificently done, both on the stage and in the films, by Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

Briefly, it concerns a vaudeville sister act, the brunette member of which gets married and retires while the blonde goes on to Paris and an international success. The brunette wishes to return to the stage, but her husband, Franchot Tone, who is writing a musical show for Tullio Carminati, has that old-fashioned idea that a wife's place is in the home.

Carminati brings the blonde over from France to star in his revue. She rushes off to Atlantic City to pursue a love affair, leaving her ex-partner, with hair newly dyed in the requisite golden tints, to impersonate her at rehearsals. On opening night, the blonde is first delayed, then carried off by her indignant French husband, while Mr. Tone's wife saves the day.

In the meantime, Mr. Tone has had a love affair with his own wife; but at last he tells her that he knew her all the time—even as Miss Fontanne told Mr. Lunt in "The Guardsman" under similar circumstances.

There are opportunities for several elaborate spectacles built around the popular tunes, "Coffee in the Morning" and "Boulevard of Broken Dreams." These are excellently done, with imaginative settings and Hollywood's usual quotas of beautiful and capable dancing girls. Russ Columbo appears opposite Miss Bennett in one number and sings just like Bing Crosby. The Boswell Sisters are also present for a few minutes.

Miss Bennett acts acceptably in several different styles. Mr. Carminati, of "Strictly Dishonorable" fame, confirms the good impression he made in his first picture, Ann Harding's "Gallant Lady." Mr. Tone, who went to Cornell, deports himself in the best Cornell tradition.

And after you have seen two Constance Bennetts, you are privileged to watch four Charley Chases cutting capers in a comedy short; quite a week for double exposures and trick photography and all that. A rollicking "Goofy Movie," a Mickey Mouse cartoon, and the Hearst Metrotone Newsreel complete the bill.

Greek Drama In Debut At Tech

By GEORGE SEIBEL

"Medea," presented in the little theater of Carnegie Tech Drama School, is the most important dramatic offering of the moment. It affords students and lovers of drama an opportunity to see one of the classics in which many famous actresses have won their greatest triumphs, and it also affords a glimpse of "the glory that was Greece." Especially in the management of the choruses as dancing commentaries upon the action, the production has a lesson for modern theatergoers. Besides that, it gives Jane Feather and Dorothy Neumann an opportunity to show their tragic powers.

Mr. Seibel

The other current occasion was the very satisfactory production of "The Devil," by Molnar, put on by the Dracomtra Players. Young W. H. Bergheimer acquitted himself with highest honor.

Sarah C. Pettit's heredity play, "The Guest," is the most interesting announcement for the coming week. It will be presented Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Theater.

The East Liberty Y. M. C. A. has now definitely embarked upon a little theater program with the announcement of "It Happened in Hollywood" as the first production, April 5 and 6. Oscar E. Norbeck is the director of the movement and will stage the productions. In the prospectus of activities, this group indicates a very serious purpose of educational scope, avoiding the pink tea and bohemian tendencies as well as fads and petty jealousies.

At the latest word, ten dramatic groups had enlisted for the coming Drama League one-act-play contest. That will mean three evenings instead of the four that have been given in past years. It will also mean closer competition for the prizes offered.

Beauty, Laughs In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Rhythm and beauty, lovely effects and laughs, a gay musical background, attest to the fact in the Pitt that Harry Delmar knows how to stage a revue that has a desirable finish and abounds in ability. Costumes, dancers and scenic effects are equally appealing, with interjections of comedy and singing that Harry Delmar's "Revels" show moving at a good clip.

Dancers there are aplenty, blondes, brunettes and redheads. Grace DeFaye twists her body with an astonishing grace that exacts resounding applause. Ray Ellis and La Rue do several adagio numbers in unusual settings that fittingly back their artistry, while redheaded Patsy Dell offers a gliding tap as her expert contribution. All of them are good—not just "pretty good."

There's a comedian in the cast, as you might know, and what a comedian. Manny King, the funster, jokes the audience into an almost hysterical state that comes near stopping the show. With the assistance of a few sober faces he supplies enough laughs to keep the corners of your mouth turned up all day.

Also every now and then, at almost any odd moment, singing Paddy Cliff enters the "Revels" musically introducing a series of picturesque dances by the comely chorus. Betty Gerard, too, is a songster in the sketch, but her numbers are less effective than Cliff's.

"Fog" is the name and the background, both, for the screen feature. On board ship, with the heavy grey mist pressing down, Mary Brian, Donald Cook and Reginald Denny, are the central characters in a murder mystery of fairly convincing drama.

Trip to Bermuda

(Part One.)

CASTLE HARBOUR HOTEL, BERMUDA: Don't worry. Your wandering columnist has not gone for another trip around the world. I'm just down here for a short rest. I don't know what I'm resting for or from, and I probably will find no quiet until I reach home again. But a rest is always a good excuse for a vacation, so we'll let it go at that.

As clearly as I can recall it, the trip came about in this fashion:

I was sitting at home one night when the little lady—oh, how I hate that phrase!—came barging into the living room.

"Honey baby," she said "You look tired."

If I'd had any brains, I would have said I felt fine and ended the conversation immediately. When a wife calls you "honey," it's dangerous.

"You're right, dear," I said. "I'm pretty weary."

"That's what I thought," she cried, looking very happy. "You're sick. All run down, that's what you are. You've got to get away at once. Too many Broadwayites in Florida right now, so we won't go there.

"Oh, I know! I just thought of the ideal spot for a fine rest, Bermuda! We haven't been there in three years. I just happened to think of it. Bermuda! We'll leave on the next boat!"

"Out of the question," I insisted. "I have too much work right now. And the expense—"

"Listen, mister," she replied, forgetting entirely the "honey baby" of a moment before, "you can kid the public—but you can't kid me. As long as you're on the topic of expenses, permit me to remind you once again that you still owe me a Christmas present."

Nobody had to tell me that I was as good as in Bermuda right then and there. One mention of that missing Christmas present, and I'm a pretty sick pup. I'll admit that I did miss that particular present last year, but it wasn't my fault. I was in California on the big day. And when I came back, it was pretty late. And—well, any husband will appreciate my position.

But any husband will not appreciate the result of this particular neglect on my part. I have heard as much about that present as I have heard about the World War, and that's a pretty good comparison.

I smiled weakly, which was the best I could do under the circumstances.

"All right, dear," I said. "I'll call the Furness Line in the morning and see what I can do about tickets. As long as your heart is set on going to Bermuda, there's nothing I can do about it."

"There you go," she observed sadly. "Telling me now that my heart is set on Bermuda. I never dreamed of such a trip until I saw you looking so pale and wan a few minutes ago. I only thought of it because of you."

"There, there, sweetheart," I murmured, "we'll go to Bermuda for a few days, so what's the difference? I'm glad you happened to think of it. But, by the way, if we're leaving right away, what are we going to do about clothes and things? Your dresses, I mean, and my white pants and—"

She grinned cheerfully.

"Nothing to worry about in that direction, darling," she returned. "I took care of all that two weeks ago!" . . .

Love Murder In Warner

By MARY SHINE

Is a wife justified in murdering a rival for her husband's love? If she is, and does, will her conscience allow her to be happy and will she regain her husband's love later? This is the question solved from one woman's standpoint in the Warner in "Journal of a Crime."

Adolphe Menjou, in a role that does not give him a great deal of opportunity to do the suave acting of which he is capable, falls in love with a prima donna. His wife, (Ruth Chatterton) waiting outside the stage door one night, overhears the girl ask her husband to divorce Ruth and he agrees. Ruth tries to win back her husband, and failing, shoots the singer at a rehearsal. An escaped murderer, hiding in the theater, is arrested and is charged with killing the singer, too.

Ruth's husband is the only person who knows she committed the crime. He believes he hates her. Instead of telling the police, he waits patiently day after day for remorse to break his wife physically or mentally. Each day he records the changes he notices in her in his daily journal.

Ruth Chatterton has won much acclaim as a dramatic actress, and, although in watching this picture one grows weary of waiting as she drags herself through scene after scene with drooping mouth and haggard eyes, she makes it convincing.

Finally the wife decides to "tell all" to the police and try to find peace. On her way, she is injured by a truck, and due to mental strain as well as shock of the accident, suffers complete loss of memory of her past life. Very, very convenient it is, indeed, and is hereby recommended as the very best way out of such difficulties.

There is also a Popeye cartoon, a comedy and Pathe news.

Two Features In Davis

By MARGARET GARRAHAN

Take a woman who knows what she wants and how to get it, add a husband who's fancy-free, and you have "Easy to Love," film which opened yesterday in the Davis and Regent.

Tempering high comedy with just enough reality, the film is literally sprinkled with chuckles. The "laughs" are far from trite, and the situations that provoke them are immensely human.

The story has to do with the plight of a wife of wealth who discovers her husband's affection has strayed. How she retrieves the affection, utilizing a unique little plot and the adoration of a would-be swain, provides an absorbing farce.

Genevieve Tobin is cast as the wife, and Adolphe Menjou as the husband. Mary Astor is the "other woman" and Edward Everett Horton, the swain. Guy Kibbee, in a brief appearance as a justice of the peace, rates a high laugh percentage, and Patricia Ellis is convincing as the daughter who finally rights everything.

"Bombay Mail," a murder mystery with the entire action taking place on an Oriental express, is the second feature of the Davis-Regent double bill. Edmund Lowe, Ralph Forbes, Shirley Grey and Hedda Hopper have the principal roles.

An animated cartoon and a newsreel complete the bill.

Variety Is to Reopen Sunday Midnight

"Runaway Girls," the biggest burlesque show to be presented here in 10 years, will reopen the Variety with a Sunday midnight show. Eighteen principals, including Oriental dancers, prime donne, "blues" singers, dance teams, five comedians and an entire new chorus of 24 girls from a New York musical comedy production that recently closed. "Runaway Girls" is in two acts and 44 episodes. Included in the cast are "Diana," Reggie White, "Original Tassel Twisting Girl," Georgia Sothorn, Oriental dancer; William Horner, Buster Marco, Arline Milburn and Georgia St. George, all dancers; Joe De Rita, Happy Hyatt, Abe Sher and Fank Penny, comedians; Al Golden, Cliff Carr and Jimmy Gerard. A number of vaudeville acts, with the dance team of Victor and Younk, headlining, are also in the show. The box office is now open.

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By GWYNN

HOLLYWOOD, March 3.—Well, "Operator 13," the new Marion Davies starring picture, finally went into work this week after many delays and a complete change in the production lineup.

The film went before the camera with a new director, Richard Boleslavsky, who replaced Raoul Walsh; a new supervisor, Lucien Hubbard, instead of Walter Wanger, originally scheduled to produce; a new script and with few faces in the cast. Practically the only "old face" or the original setup which remains is George Folsey's. This ace cameraman still is on the job.

Incidentally, they've been testing and testing for someone to portray the role of Abraham Lincoln in "Operator 13." Walter Houston, a good old Lincoln standby, being in New York for a Broadway show, the part was getting harder and harder to fill. Suddenly someone looked at the picture's supervisor, Lucien Hubbard—and screamed with delight. The delighted screamer was Marion Davies, who made the big discovery that Hubbard was a perfect Lincoln in appearance, and, believe it or not, the supervisor has consented to play the part!

With most movie stars looking for Beverly Hills and Bel-Air estates (those who can afford 'em, of course), Lee Tracy has gone and moved into a two-story penthouse atop a big Hollywood apartment house! Sort of preserving New York traditions, we take it. Anyway, he's crazy about the place—particularly because Isabel Jewell attended to all the decorations herself.

M-G-M's sudden plans to rush Jackie Cooper and Wally Beery into the co-starring roles of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island" have left Sol Lesser, independent producer, in a terrible fix. Lesser had planned to borrow Jackie for the lead in his production of "Peck's Bad Boy," and he won't have an easy time replacing him in this story, which was "tailored" for the Cooper cheeild. According to present plans, M-G-M will film most of "Treasure Island" way off in Tahiti, with Victor Fleming directing.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS!

Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance

By MARION BRUNOT

American Women Deserve Nice Things of Life

Upturn almost miraculous considering this time last year. Seems too good to be true, recalling what a year ago was. No coal in the bin. The grocer at end of his wits whether to trust us any longer. Our faces dried up by lack of cold creams and by the gnawing of fear. Hands all palsied with the frenzy of stretching pennies.

And now the sun beginning to shine. The storm far away. And all of us not afraid to meet the other fellow.

"Ain't it a grand and glorious feelin'?"

Yet, what was it we kept saying when we were in the doldrums?

Never again would we allow ourselves to be in such a position. Never again would we be brought to fear the ring of the doorbell or the telephone. When we really got started again, the day would never return when we had nothing but memories of a good time.

SPIRIT OF ADVENTURE

We would become the prize little hoarders.

We had learned our lesson, and would we profit!

Even so, we are AMERICANS. THE SPIRIT OF ADVENTURE IS NOT DEAD. We are a people who believe in the UP AND UP. And I'll wager right here, and with anyone, we'll all join in the ballyhoo.

And why not?

We can look back at Old Man DEPRESSION now. He is in retreat, and a pesky fellow he is. Yet it wasn't just the spend-thrift who suffered. Gee! if we had only spent on riotous living that money that disappeared. Over and over again, the cry went up from the woman who had refused trips and fine clothes and nearby pleasures, and all that she might save her shining dollars for investments. And how those investments went bad!

And so, perhaps, the biggest blessing of all that walked right out of the hard times was LET TOMORROW TAKE CARE OF ITSELF.

VALUE OF CLOTHES

We need the nice things of life today. They encourage us. We should have the big easy chair with the comfy cushions to sit and read in or to do our snoozing in. We need the delight of the fresh frill and the feel of the stylish fabric. The hat that slides right up the face with the lifting market. That is for us, too.

I took a jaunt through the stores this morning. It was a sight for sore eyes. The beauty of the raiment. The adventures in new patterns. Suits that are distinctly different. And the dresses and the under garments. Even shoes have a fresh fling. Clothes make the young lovely. Clothes lift 10 years right off the back for us. Clothes turn grandmother into a creature with sex appeal.

You all know the Bible tale of the talents. The ones buried did nobody any good. An old man who filled my childhood with wonder died in a dingy room with the shades all drawn and on torn and soiled sheets. Nobody was with him. Nobody cared.

When his will was read nephews and nieces who hadn't given him a thought were the only heirs. And what they did with that money would fill a book. One went to Europe and trapsed into the Louvre and up and down the Rue de Rivili. Another bought a chicken farm, and then forgot to raise chickens. Another went into a jewelry store and purchased his wife a three karat diamond ring.

Oh, the way that fortune disappeared was very surprising. And neighbors gossiped. And yet it was life. The heirs were human beings and not imbeciles of material greed.

WANTS TO BUY

Dear Miss Brunot:

My husband at last has gotten the kind of a job he wants. For five long years after he lost his last job, he waited and how I suffered. I cooked and scrubbed and even turned his suits inside out to make him presentable. And I never woke up in the morning without fearing the day. And now since we are on easy street again I want a spree. Not to get drunk. But just to go into the store and buy things for myself from the skin out.

But he says it wouldn't be right. I must wait. We must save for the rainy day. I want you to decide this for me.

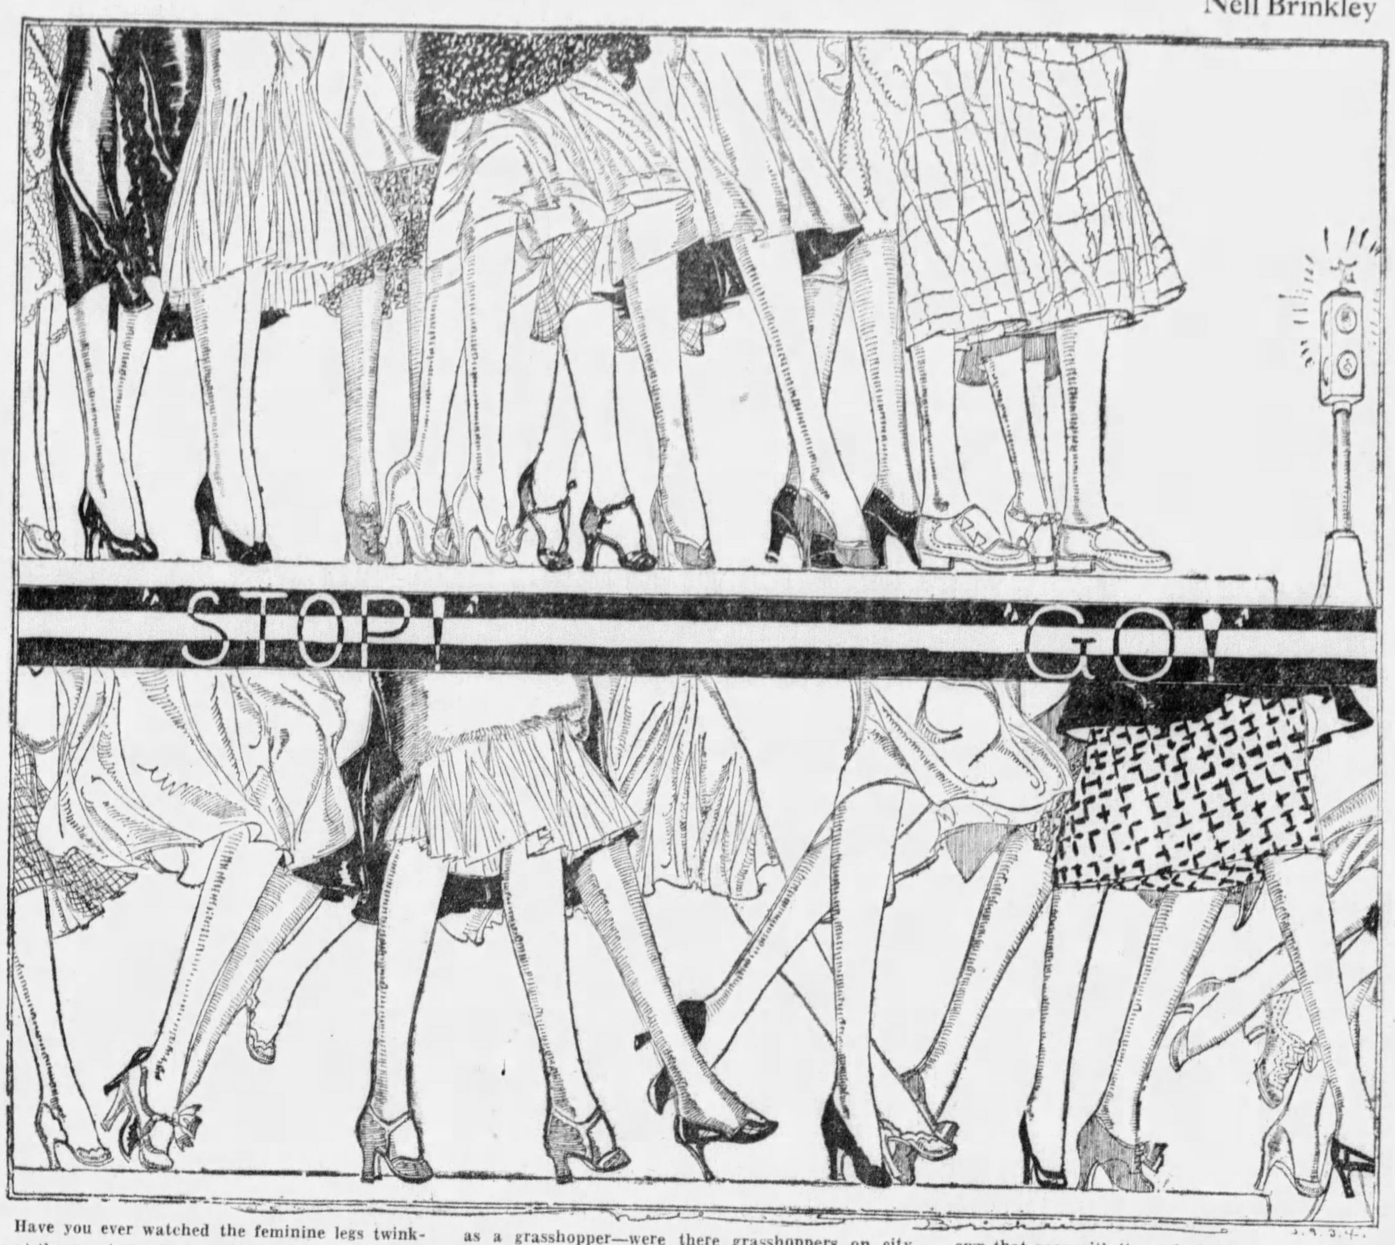
NOTHING TO WEAR.

You have waited long enough, sister, and merely to please an egotist who wanted his pride to remain intact. I have the greatest pity for people who have suffered in the last few years. But I find that quality in me has been completely drained when it reaches the specialist who even for his wife and children couldn't take any less of a position than the one he had had.

Now that your husband has finally pleased himself, it is high time you, the butt of his depression, should have your spree. Tell this man of yours exactly that. And by all means get the new duds from the skin out. And here's hoping you have a good time in them!

'STOP—GO!'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



Have you ever watched the feminine legs twinkling at the crossings of the rapids tossing with humanity that we earth-dwellers call streets? Rivers they are—our streets—and they toss up some interesting objects on the crests of their waves.

I know if you are a human with a gray or cafe au lait head piece, a neat tie in plaid with a muffler to match, a double-breaster in rich dark gray or blue, shoes that weigh 10 pounds (they look that to the shy, speculative eye of this lady!) and are of the brilliance and color of an expensive old saddle—I know, I say, that you DO watch the feminine legs that go twinkling by. But with the longer skirts than prevailed some years ago, when the artist could just "let go" on views from a few inches above the knee down, I know you do not get as good a view as a man as you would as a grasshopper—were there grasshoppers on city streets!

But an artist can put himself or herself in the place of the lowly or the cloud-rider at will. He or she sees the world and the people who quaintly supply it with comedy, tragedy, beauty or ugliness from any and every angle, and enjoys himself or herself doing it.

Yesterday I watched the pretty, the slender, the stick-like, the chubby, the straight, the boyish, the demure feminine traveling mechanisms obeying the emerald and the ruby lights. There were those in sandals in winter time. There were those whose heels were low to mother earth. Those whose heels put them on miniature stilts. Shoes too short, beneath round, short legs swaying backward. Do you have to see the face to know what she looks like? Nay-nay. For every foot and ankle and shoe you can make a face of your own that goes with it—and nine times out of ten you will be right! You even know what kind of a hat will be perched on the curls above a certain type of foot.

That's why, young woman, it is almost useless for you to struggle against your bony frame! The hair, the face, the muscles and flesh, and even the color that goes on last, will run true to the type that goes with your particular skeleton. Sculptors and doctors know that. There is no cream that will make your legs thin if the framework of your head and shoulders is of the type that ALWAYS goes with stocky and muscular legs. But you CAN make your SHOES lie about your type! Get your shoes long enough for your feet. Don't wear run-over heels and light-colored shoes gone shabby and dirty. Even if your figure is broad and your purse is poor you can look like a "lady" to the grasshoppers. —NELL BRINKLEY.

Contract Bridge

How to Play
How to Win

By Josephine Culbertson

An Amusing Result

"Since our miserable opponents stopped at one on a hand which could probably make at least three and conceivably four-odd in spades, our only chance to get an average score seemed to be to defeat the contract of one. Accordingly, with the co-operation of the West player, we did so." Thus spoke South, after he and his partner had defeated West one trick at a contract of one spade on the hand below. His analysis, strange as it seems, was correct, as with anything but a heart Opening, West, due to a fortunate break in the spade suit, can make at least ten tricks with spades or diamonds as trump.

The hand took place in the Pair event of the Grand National Championship held in New York City in January.

West, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

	♠ J 6 5 ♡ K J 8 5 4 ◇ A 7 3 2 ♣ Q
♠ A K 8 7 ♡ 9 ◇ K J 8 6 ♣ A K 9 8	West / East / North / South	♠ 10 4 3 ♡ A 2 ◇ Q 10 5 4 ♣ 10 7 5 2
	♠ Q 9 2 ♡ Q 10 7 6 3 ◇ 9 ♣ J 6 4 3

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠ (1)	Pass	Pass (2)	Pass

1—Obviously not near strong enough distributionally for an Opening two-bid, despite the five honor-tricks.

2—A very bad pass.

Against the final contract of one spade, North opened the club Queen, which West won with the King in his own hand. Instead of tackling trumps immediately, Declarer decided to try to remove the Ace of diamonds while he still held control of the heart suit, and laid down the King from his own hand. North won with the Ace and immediately returned a low card of that suit.

At this point North and South proceeded to make each of their six trumps separately, due to the perfect double cross-ruff which had been established by the Opening lead and Declarer's play to trick 2.

It is apparent that had West immediately played the Ace, King and a small spade and guessed the club situation later on, he could have made five-odd on the hand, and his play at trick 2, innocuous as it seemed at the time, lost exactly five tricks for him.

Household Hints

Berets will not dry out of shape if they are molded, while still wet from washing, on a small pudding basin.

When cleaning the gas stove or range, moisten the blacklead with a little methylated spirit. This will give a brilliant polish.

To prevent rashers of bacon from shrinking during the process of frying, dip them into flour; this prevents the fat from running.

To clean jewelry quickly, wash first in soapsuds, dry, then dip into a mixture of sawdust and whiting. Polish afterwards with a soft duster.

Guard Child From Jealousy

By LISA GRENELLE

Jealousy, which unfortunately infests most homes and destroys not a few, is the most common, the most vicious, pernicious and lasting of all bad emotional habits. And it isn't confined to grown-ups. It is often fostered and developed, sometimes to an amazing degree, in the nursery—in any nursery not carefully guarded against it.

You may hear a mother say, "It's the queerest thing, the way Margie is always picking on Jane!" or comment on "the way those Willard boys fight." While another adds, "If a package comes for our Mary, Josephine sulks all day. Such an unfortunate disposition that child has!"

Oh, yes? And whose fault is it? Josephine was born that way, her parents both declare. Of course Josephine was born jealous. Aren't we all? For jealousy is fear—and fear and desire are the two fundamental emotions common to all of us. The only difference is that some are born more sensitive, more prone to fear, than others—fear of the dark, of people, of being hurt, or of being surpassed and supplanted in the affections of someone loved and respected. Undoubtedly some are more inclined to jealousy than others.

This tendency, like all fears, must be curbed and so far as possible eradicated in childhood, lest it grow gradually to phobia proportions; lest that jealous child become the jealous man or woman for whom any lasting friendship or happy marriage is impossible—the most utterly miserable of human beings. For each year any emotional habit becomes harder to subdue, no matter how clearly realized.

Hence jealousy as a childish disease must be cured in the nursery, or there is grave danger that it will become chronic and threaten the child's future happiness and that of all with whom he associates as child or man. Sometimes childish jealousy cures itself, just as sometimes a patient survives even a critical illness without the aid and advice of a doctor. But the risk is great, and since a little care and effort will avert the casualty in time, there is no reason to let any child grow up handicapped with a jealous nature.

To avoid this, care must be taken by parents to show no preference to one child above another; to be careful, when a new baby arrives, that the older children shall feel, not supplanted, but in partnership with the parents in the care of the baby. In other words, the new baby should be presented to their minds not as a rival, but as their new responsibility.

If his parents, or people in general, see more to praise in sister than in Tommy, quite naturally Tommy feels that sister must really be his superior. Therefore, he hates her. He becomes spiteful against her and schemes to pull her down in everyone's eyes, including his own. Sister retaliates by hating Tommy as enthusiastically as he hates her, and all possibility of a happy relationship between them has been destroyed.

Take care, then, not to make one child feel better loved than another or that it is regarded as more difficult or more inclined to naughtiness, lest you develop the most unhappy side of your child's nature.

Madge Begins to Worry About Edith Fairfax

I have known the time, and that not very far from the present day, when overhearing Edith Fairfax propose to my husband a moonlight trip to the ocean would have caused me much mental anguish, and kept me busy trying not to betray my jealousy.

But my reaction to the proposition she had just voiced was a curious one. I felt no spark of jealousy whatever, but I did feel an infinite weariness as, with my memory flashing back over the kaleidoscopic years, I found myself comparing Edith's long campaign to win Dicky from me with that which Avis Arlen had been waging against Mary.

FEARS FOR MARY

Was history repeating itself? I asked myself. Was Mary to be compelled to face the heartache, the disillusionment, the jealousy that had been mine? Grace Draper, Bess Dean, Edith Fairfax, the mysterious "Floss," who as yet was only a voice over a telephone to me, whatever she was to Dicky—they passed in rapid review before my brain, and then gave way to the Princess Olina and Avis Arlen, the two girls who had disputed Mary's claim to Noel.

Life—married life—must be cut to one pattern, I thought drearily. There was no safeguard in marriage for a woman whose husband was handsome and mentally alert enough to be attractive to other women. I had discovered that in the first year of my marriage, when Grace Draper first began her war against my married happiness—a war which, indeed, had included a deliberate attempt to murder me. But Mary, my husband's lovely young niece whom I loved as I might a daughter of my own—I shrank as I thought of her facing the same unhappy moments which had been mine.

HUSBAND TRUE

I shook myself back to sanity with a little startled jerk. As usual, I told myself with stern self-flagellation. I had been indulging my imagination. True, the attempts of other women to win my husband from me were not figments of my imagination, but I knew that much of the misery resulting to me from those attempts were caused by my own mistaken mental reactions to them.

Dicky never had been really untrue to me. I am as firmly convinced of that as I am of the love of my small son, without which I should not care to live. And I am sure that if I could have substituted tolerant amusement at the philanderings of my Peter Pan—who never will grow up, romantically, I am persuaded of that now—for the jealous misery which has so often been mine, I could have been much happier, and made my husband happier.

Not that I have given Dicky much cause to call me "jealous." That has been one of the strongest aims of my married life—to keep him from suspecting how his attentions to other women or, to do him justice, his reactions to the pursuit of other women, have affected me. But in order to conceal my jealousy effectively, I often have been compelled to pretend an indifference, a boredom, which, while it may have kept him interested, has also, I know, sometimes irritated him almost to frenzy.

Would Mary employ those tactics, I wondered with sudden panic. Noel was of such different temperament from Dicky that I trembled for the success of her marriage if she took a leaf from my book. Far more sensitive than Dicky, and without my Peter Pan's gorgeous sense of humor, he would be frantic with pain if he should suspect that Mary were indifferent to him, or bored.

OWN TROUBLES

I put an iron hand upon my imaginings and came back to earth at the sound of Dicky's voice—he either had not heard Edith at first or had pretended deafness. Mary's problems could wait, I told myself. She and Noel were safely away, beyond the reach of any outside influence. I would turn my attention upon my own troubles, for though I no longer felt jealous of Edith, her attitude toward Dicky still constituted a distinct problem in my life.

"Did you hear me, Dicky?" Edith had just asked, with all the sharpness of a shrewish spouse many years married; and Dicky had started, as might a suddenly spurred horse.

"Yes, yes, old dear," he said, with a lightness which I knew was forced; "I heard you the first time. I've just been trying to decide whether I wished to leave the comfortable home fireside for a drive to the ocean, even on this heavenly night. Let's leave it to my faithful spouse. After all, she's the most fatigued of any one of us. What say, Madge? Do you want to go cavorting out into the moonlight? If so, it's all right by me, baby, although privately I shall dub you a colossal idiot."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Combatting Maternity Hazards

It is discouraging to learn that the dangers of childbirth in New York City and many other communities continue to be unnecessarily great. A recent report of the New York Academy of medicine recommends that all prospective mothers receive adequate instruction in prenatal care. It is probable that many of the accidents of childbirth can be traced to lack of care before the birth of the baby.

Dr. Copeland

What is meant by "prenatal care?" It means more than registering at a clinic or arranging with the doctor to take charge during confinement. Proper care can be expected only in those cases where the expectant mother reports to her physician as soon as pregnancy is suspected.

If this is done the mother may be assured of the supervision that will prevent complications and difficulties in labor. In addition, it means repeated visits to the doctor and following his instructions in hygiene and nutrition, both so essential to an uneventful confinement.

Of greatest importance is the early discovery of any physical abnormality that may exist. It can be readily seen that when a fault is recognized during the early stages, the expectant mother will be saved many unnecessary hours of agony, suffering and perhaps something worse. In this matter certainly "an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure."

Unfortunately too many prospective mothers do not avail themselves of the offerings of modern medical science.

Though hospitals have become more popular, fatalities continue to be reported. In my opinion, many unnecessary tragedies would be avoided if the expectant mother were to receive adequate prenatal care and carefully followed a few simple rules of hygiene and diet.

During pregnancy the mother should have plain but nourishing diet. It should include plenty of milk, vegetables and fruits. These will supply the needed and increased amount of minerals. Minerals are essential to proper growth of the teeth and bones of the coming baby. Avoid overindulgence in foods, and any fried and greasy food. Drink plenty of water.

The elimination should be carefully regulated and any tendency towards constipation eradicated. Keep the skin clean and active by luke-warm or cool baths, sponges and showers. Avoid hot baths, mustard footbaths and surf bathing.

I am often asked whether exercise is harmful during pregnancy. Moderate exercise, such as walking in the open air, is necessary and decidedly beneficial. Walk slowly for two hours every day. Do not walk until fatigued and, above all, refrain from sudden exertions, such as lifting or reaching up for heavy objects. Report to your doctor at regular intervals so that he may check on your health and progress.

Correct Manners

Gifts for Graduates

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a graduate to take a present to a sister graduate? What if there are two girls giving the one party? Is it also proper for a boy graduate to take a present to the party?

J.

If, in your community, it is the custom to take gifts to a graduate's party, and if you wish to take a gift, then you do it, whether you are a girl or a boy. This question of when we give gifts and when we don't is, naturally, such a personal one, that no definite rule covers all occasions. If two girls are giving the party and you plan to give a gift, you should take a gift to each hostess.

A boy graduate would probably like best to send flowers, either a corsage or a box of flowers, to arrive on the afternoon of the party. Flowers are more appropriate for a boy to send than any other kind of gift.

The Bride Entertains

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

How soon after a bride is married should she give her reception? A says that it should be given within six months, and B says within one month after they are settled in their new home. C says that a spring bride never entertains until the fall. Who is correct? F.

Customarily the bride gives her reception about a month or two after she has settled in her new home. But there is great latitude about this, and if she wishes to postpone this party six months, she may of course do so. It all depends on her convenience and wishes, but ordinarily she wishes to begin her new social life rather soon by giving a general party for her friends.

JUNIOR PATROL

We wonder how many of you know how to cook, fellows!

Of course, we just take it for granted that the girls already know how, or that they are learning. Well, we are hoping some of the boys are learning to cook, too. Elsewhere in this paper every day the Sun-Telegraph prints the Prudence Penny prize recipes.

Many mothers are cutting these recipes out and pasting them in their cook books. And by making the dishes described in the recipes they are having many different kinds of things to eat.

The best time to start learning to cook is when you are growing up. You should start with easy things to cook at first, such as toasting bread and gradually make more elaborate things.

Especially, knowing how to cook comes in handy when you go on a camping trip. Spring and warm weather isn't far off now. Soon you will want to get out into the country for picnic lunch or dinner. Lots of fellows don't even know how to break eggs in a pan without spilling them. And when you are camping out a cold lunch of sandwiches and water isn't so good. But if you can scramble some eggs, and maybe fry a small steak, and make coffee, you're all set. Or better yet, maybe you could mix some flap jacks. Warm things like these are mighty tasty.

Now, if you want to learn how to cook, why not get your sister, mother, or some of the girls in your Junior Patrol club to teach you how they do it? Maybe they are still learning how to cook some things themselves and you could help and watch. We mustn't forget, though, that cooking isn't quite all fun—there is washing of dishes and scouring of pans to be done, and cleaning up. But the good cook doesn't mind that. It's all part of the fun, too.

Have you a toothache, fellows? Don't neglect it. Pain in your tooth or anywhere else is a warning signal. Go to the dentist. Your body is telling you that there is something wrong. You should do something about it. If you don't have a family doctor to go to, tell your teacher about it, and ask to see the school doctor. You know, there is no such thing as growing pains. Let a doctor find out, and be sure that you are all right. And if you have a bad cough or cold, the best place for you is in bed. If you go to school, sneezing and sniffing, you may give your cold or cough to other children. That isn't the right, polite thing to do.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am,
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger,
I promise to study hard and do errands willingly.
I promise to be a 100% Junior Patrol member.

them thickly with long black hair, stand them side by side.

MEN THAT understand prize-fighting, including Damon Runyon, who sits like a brooding eagle, agree that Loughran did marvelously well, especially as he was "dead on his feet" after the tenth round, and went on fighting, baffling the efforts of giant Carnera to knock him out by sheer courage and boxing skill.

When Runyon tells about prize-fighting it is as though Ulysses, after his travels, were to tell you of queer things in and around Greece.

THERE WERE two kinds of dinosaurs, millions of years ago, one a vegetarian, gigantic, seventy feet long, the other, much smaller, was a meat-eating dinosaur.

The carnivorous dinosaur's disagreeable habit was to eat his herbivorous brother, but sometimes, presumably, the heavy herbivorous once stepped on the little carnivorous one, and the latter's plans went astray. Thursday night Carnera was the big herbivorous, and Loughran the little carnivorous Celtic dinosaur, and Loughran was stepped on.

Listen to the gentlemen that sit crouching, outside the corner of each fighter, his managers, trainers, rubbers and others, all shouting assorted advice. Carnera's manager, Mr. Duffy, a flowing spring of encouragement mingled with occasional rebuke, now speaks:

"That's the punch, Primo. In the liver, with that left hook."

Then a rebuke:

"Come on, boy, come on Primo, fight. You're in there to FIGHT, not to kiss him."

Aside to his friend:

"It's all right, he's going to knock him out."

But he did not. The rain falling did not discourage Mr. Duffy:

"Come on, Primo, come on boy, the rain is lucky."

A FRIEND in Carnera's corner, with a strong Italian accent, implored, at ten-second intervals, throughout the fifteen rounds:

"On you toes, Primo! On you toes! Go after him!"

A few words in Italian might have stimulated Carnera's fighting, but you are not supposed to speak those effete foreign languages around a prize ring.

Dr. See, who once managed Carnera, tried it when the latter fought Sharkey, crying to the Italian:

La gauche, — avancez, — la gauche, etc.

That was most unpopular. An honest Celt in deep depression turned to this reporter, asking, with one or two curses:

"Has it come to this, that we've got to listen to dago language at a prizefight?"

It was the French language, as a matter of fact, but it was not acceptable.

RATHER UNPLEASANT was the prejudice against Carnera, expressed in hissing and booing, because of his Italian nationality.

The crowd should have known that a distant relation of Carnera's, Christopher Columbus, discovered us, and is entitled to credit for whatever we have. That Italian landed in America before any robust German, agile Irishman or solemn Britisher landed here.

Carnera did not seem hurt and smiled good-naturedly from time to time, for there is no venom in his nature. And, as a philosophical Italian, he knows it is better to be heavyweight champion of the world, and booed by ignoramuses, than to be cheered and lose.

IT WAS not a big but "very select crowd," as Mr. James Johnston pointed out, shifting the position of his cigar, so that the ash pointed to the star, Vega, just overhead.

It was indeed "select," composed largely of those with nothing to do, and money with which to do it.

There were workers there also, persons of experience and achievement, for instance, Gene Tunney, who went into fist fighting, although he did not like it, after he finished his fighting with the United States Marines, and got out as undefeated world champion when he had accumulated a million or two.

And there was a son of Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, enough of itself to prove the accuracy of Mr. Johnston's "select" statement. And Rosika Dolly, one of two sisters known by anybody who knows anything, was there with curls in perpendicular rows all the way along her forehead, and her husband, Irving Netcher, beside her.

And there was an acutely intelligent person, Enzo Fiermonte, Italian prizefighter, beautiful in face and figure, who came here to fight, but discovered a better business. He married a lady, the second Mrs. John Jacob Astor, later Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor Dick, now Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor Dick Fiermonte.

She sat beside her husband, both looking happy, she, perhaps, rejoicing that handsome Mr. Fiermonte would never have to be hit like that, he, perhaps, happy for the same reason.

But where is happiness unalloyed? Nowhere. Mr. Fiermonte's prize fight manager, who was to have half of all Fiermonte's "earnings" in the United States, now claims, with lawyers to back him, half of whatever money Mr. Fiermonte gets from his new bride. How would you settle that?

IN MACAULAY'S great description of the impeachment of Warren Hastings, the lady carried out in a faint provided a valuable "high spot." Something better, more impressive was the screaming lady at the fight.

Weighing not over one hundred pounds, the earnest young lady began screaming when Loughran was forced against the ropes, showered with heavy blows, unable to resist, in his exhausted condition, toward the end of the fight.

Terrifically and amazingly energetic, the lady said by Universal Service to be Miss Eleanor Smith, daughter of Joe Smith, Loughran's manager, did what the big-lunged announcer in the prize-ring could not do, even with the help of "an amplifier."

Her shrieks started "chaos and old night," split the rainy air, startled everybody in the big crowd, even caused Carnera to interrupt his hunt for a knock-out opportunity, and turn around to see who could scream so loud.

The two prize-fighters, rolled into one, total weight four hundred and fifty-four pounds, could not have developed the energy of that 100-pound girl, when she decided to have hysterics.

SPORT AND KNOCKABOUT COSTUMES THAT ARE SWANKY

The cheery yellowish tint of natural chamois makes this chevrita leather jacket swell for tweed ensembling. Note the single pocket and the lapels which may be buttoned snugly to the chin.

Brown and orange, this tie silk blouse, and the skirt is brown flannel, buttoned from waist to hem.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THERE IS ONE branch of fashion that should be recognized as being all-American, like the stars and stripes or the Volstead amendment. It is the sports clothes and all their accessories—a department that is completely utilitarian in England and quite the butterfly array in France, and nothing very much at all elsewheer except in this country.

American designers and imaginative American women have taken the best points from both British and French sports costumes but turned out year after year clothes so smart, and so comfortable and hardy, that European women go for them enthusiastically.

It is over here, too, that the sports costume has been encouraged to sneak into the city scenes more and more, so that peaty tweeds which are eminently comfortable for all day wear do not look weird in the subway, and practically anyone can look at a polo coat on mid-town boulevards without expecting to see a horse backing it up sartorially.

THERE ARE two major divisions in sports clothes which are appropriate to this month. One is the knitted costume, the other the blouse and skirt, or jumper and skirt combination. Anyone daft over games of any sort will load up on these two sports models, knowing that they will be just as handy behind a contract table on one's NRA day off as they will be for railbirding at race tracks.

Two requisites in sports clothes are that they fit, and they have dash. It is the best chance a woman has to try out daring color schemes, and many a girl who looks commonplace in little dressmaker frocks has learned to eschew them in favor of the sports ensembles that she thinks up for herself.

THERE IS a lot of yellow in sports costumes for this spring, and dusty turquoise blue is another favorite. Lichen green, chartreuse, Parma violet, and bright clay orange are equally good. The trick is not to wear a get-up in one solid fashionable tone, however; it lies in setting off one main tone with another that is daring. A pencil blue flat silk or worsted scarf on a red-brown suit, or on a chartreuse frock; a green-dyed white fox collar on a Parma violet top coat; a cerise tie and broad suede belt on a deep purple shirtmaker dress, and other strange color liaisons are the idea.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Something new in plaid silk blouses, for it is broadcloth, not taffeta. It is a colorful item for the town or sports tweed suit, and useful for a linen tailleur, besides.

Peace Pact With Germany Fails to Ease Poland's Fears of Warfare

Warsaw Signs But Keeps Alert For Defense

cavalryman was only one among the 15,000 soldiers, but today "The Great Little Zurawel" is a national hero whose fame helps explain why Poland feels she can await her military future with confidence.

"Little Zurawel" fainted when the parade was over. Then and only then did his comrades learn that he had broken his leg three days before, had ridden three days on the march to Cracow and had hidden his injury because he had to see Marshal Pilsudski.

GERMAN VERSION

The Germans have their own story to match this. It was a Nazi Storm Trooper who, in the last great motorcycle race in Germany, crashed in Leipzig, but drove all the way to Berlin with a broken arm and fainted only when he passed the finish line. But Nazi Germany, the modern Sparta, has no monopoly on personal heroism of its youth.

Polish-German war has been the number one scare of war-scared Europe. Germany has its Hitler and its Hindenburg. Poland has them both in one man, Pilsudski.

Both countries have their heroes in marshal's uniform and in the ranks of common soldiers. Today these two militarist countries, one the bitterest of enemies, have signed a truce, a treaty of non-aggression, for 10 years.

How could 32,000,000 Poles dare to trust the 65,000,000 Germans who have always coveted Polish soil? Does anyone imagine that Germany will give up its claim to the corridor? Is it not obvious that Hitler is only playing for time? Is it not plain that all he wants is to lull the Poles into a feeling of security, and thus prevent them from making war on Germany before she has finished re-arming?

These are the questions that the world asked when Poland began her negotiations with Hitler. Here in Warsaw the Poles make out a good case for truce.

POLES' ARGUMENT

Their argument runs about as follows:

"First of all, we have an army of 266,000 men. It is well equipped, from the Polish government munitions plants. We have an excellent air force with 700 first-class planes.

"We are forced to be a military nation by our geographical position. We used to hear a lot of criticism from abroad because we spent one-third of our budget on the army, but today since Hitler came to power, this criticism has ceased. And though our army may not be nearly as large as the one Germany may some day be able to put in the field, we always remember that the Polish army has never been defeated.

"When Hitler came to power we were not afraid. We were arming even before Hitler came. The only difference is now they will go ahead faster. It is perfectly true that our truce with Hitler will make him feel all the more certain he is going to be allowed the time necessary to rearm. But what could we do?

"We could do one of two things: Make a preventive war or not make war. We could not make war alone. France made no move, therefore we could not move. Now that we have decided not to make war, isn't it better to sew up the peace with Germany as tightly as possible, and get whatever promises we can out of her for the future?

"We are not fooled by Hitler's friendliness. We do not believe that Germany is giving up her claim to the corridor. But let us see what the position is now that we have from Hitler a promise not to fight for 10 years.

CORRIDOR PROBLEM

"That means that Germany for 10 years must cease to agitate about the corridor. And that means that with every year that passes, the outside world will become more and more used to the fact that the corridor is Polish. The German arguments will be forgotten.

"True, Hitler could ban the corridor question for a decade from German newspapers and then in two weeks work the nation into a fury over it. But public opinion in England and America won't be shocked then about Germany's claim. When Germany is rearmed and Hitler is ready to revive the corridor question, the decision will not rest between Germany and Poland alone. The decision will be made by England and America. Therefore we have everything to gain by a truce with Germany that will help bring English and American public opinion on our side."

That is the main political argument for the Polish-German truce. But the Poles also count heavily on the fact that their population is growing so much faster than the German population that time in this sense works for Poland. They are heartened by the estimates of the German official statistician, Fredrich Burgdoerfer, showing that whereas German men of military age, from 20 to 45 years old, will increase from 12,438,000 in 1930 to 13,107,000 in 1940 but will then decline to 11,677,000 by 1960, while Polish men of the same age will steadily increase from the 5,222,000 of 1930 to 6,230,000 in 1940 and 8,184,000 in 1960.

Non-Polish critics, however, are inclined to believe that German armaments could grow much faster than the Polish population. What do the Poles think of the possible speed of German re-armament?

This is a question that must have been decisive for the Polish attitude towards a preventive war. I asked one of the foremost military experts in Poland.

TRAINING AS FACTOR

"I cannot agree," he declared, "that Germany could become as militarily strong as she was in 1914 even if she has two to five years to do it in. Even five years would be too short.

"True," he went on, "Germany could become numerically as strong as she was in 1914. She could have just as many soldiers. But how would they be trained? I should say there are four good reasons why Germany could hardly rearm effectively in five years' time.

"First, because it will take a long time to amalgamate all the various military organizations of Germany,—the Storm Troops, the S. S., the Steel Helmets, and so on, — into a real unified, disciplined army.

"Second, because any hidden war material she may have must be of inferior quality. Hiding material deteriorates it.

"Third, because any of their so-called sample weapons they may get or may have, such as a few tanks, a few fighting airplanes, a few big guns, are in truth only samples, and to be of any use in war you must have thousands of them.

"Fourth, however, assuming even that they began to rearm quite openly. What does that mean? It means, in the first place, that the army has got to get used to the great variety of complicated mechanized weapons that mean so much for the conduct of modern war.

'I do not mean just the common soldiers. The common soldiers in most countries with conscript armies only train for a year or two anyway. But in Germany very few officers or non-commissioned officers will be familiar with the practical handling of these new weapons, no matter how much they may have studied them theoretically.

"And to train these officers, that is to say, to train the men who will have to train the common soldiers, will take years.

"Look at the air arm alone. Whatever training Germany officers have had in military flying has been clandestine training. Very unsatisfactory. No, it takes much time to make a modern army."

This one expert's opinion is important because it is typical of Polish opinion. If the Poles had believed that Germany could leap with one Nazi jump into the oldtime place she had at the head of the armies of Europe, the Poles might have made a preventive war.

But Poland believes that a truce with Germany will help keep the corridor for Poland; that the superior fecundity of the Poles makes time work for Poland against Germany, and finally that it will take more than five years for Germany to be ready to fight. These are the real, unsentimental reasons why Hitler in his diplomatic offensive to break up the Allied united front, was apparently first successful in Poland.

Flowing of Wine Will Also Bring Word Torrents

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

You can drink standing up in Washington now. You have 36 states to fall back on.

We left that town long about 20 years ago, when it went dry. We ain't going back because we know that the boys haven't forgotten whose treat it was.

There's certainly a lot of changes going on. They say the apple doesn't fall far from the tree. But it sure took a long roll.

Repeal in the Capital will bring back the oratory of Webster and Clay. There will be some fine speeches.

Nobody will know what they are about. But they will be great.

REMEMBER WHEN 16 WERE KILLED AT GRAY STATION?

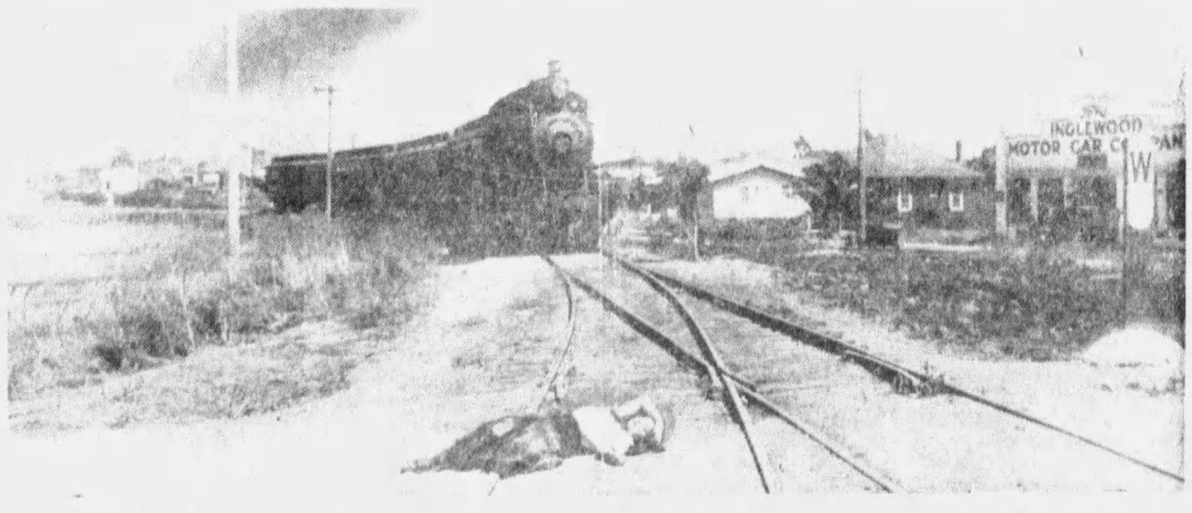
This is a Picture-Story of Dramatic Events, Personalities, Beauties, Customs and Fashions Within the Memory of Living Americans

Remember when the Washington Express, roaring eastward from Pittsburgh through the black night of June 16, 1926, crashed into the rear of the stopped Cincinnati-New York Limited about a mile beyond Gray Station (on the P. R. R. main line near Blairsville)? Rescuers probing in the wreckage found that 16 had been fatally hurt, more than 40 injured. Only one of four in the Express' engine crews lived to tell of it. These pictures are from Raymond L. Baird's collection.

Remember when Fanny Ward was astage in juvenile roles? Here she is as "Cupid" in "Pippino" not long after she had made her Broadway stage debut on November 26, 1890.

Remember when Jess Willard "knocked out" Jack Johnson in the 26th round and won the world's heavyweight title? It was in Havana, Cuba, April 5, 1915 (fought in Cuba because Johnson was under indictment in U.S.). Johnson got $60,000.

Remember when the U. S. Army lost the airship Roma in flames on the Virginia Capes on February 21, 1922? The ship was bought by the U. S. from Italy for $250,000. Only 10 of the Roma's crew of 40 officers and men escaped death. The Roma was 410 feet long and semi-rigid.



Remember when there was always a thrill in the movies? Here's a typical scene from a film of 20 years ago and shows the poor heroine on the railroad tracks—with the express puffing down the line. Why, of course the hero saved her!

BRENTWOOD, DUQUESNE PASSERS CLASH TONIGHT

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Fistic Flops in Miami. Every Show Disappoints. Court Sits On Rookies.

Sisler Not to Return. Boxing Needs Off-Season. Running Styles Changed.

Miami and poor fistic matches appear to go together. It had been hoped that with the passing of Jack Sharkey, a two-time offender in the Florida arena as the favorite son of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, there would be a change for the better, but the unsatisfactory performance of Primo Carnera Thursday night kept the string of disappointing shows unbroken. The aim of the late Tex Rickard was to hold one big fight there annually that would thrill the boxing world, but the program has served only to leave a bad taste each year and put the promoting corporation deep in the red.

Jack Sharkey

The Sharkey-Stribling match in 1929, made by Rickard himself, though Tex did not live to see it staged, was the first great flop. Stribling was as disappointing as Sharkey, and the crowd got little more for its money than a look at the arena. The following year saw Sharkey brought back with Phainting Phil Scott, and that bout was worse than the first. Next Carnera met Jimmy Maloney, and not only was it a sorry exhibition, but Referee Elmer McClelland's decision in favor of Carnera brought a storm of protest, as the majority thought Maloney had won easily. And now the Carnera-Loughran thing joins a dreary list.

CARDS GUARD AGAINST LOSING LIVE ONES

There is grief enough for a major league club owner when he coughs up a sum high in five figures for a minor league sensation and then sees the recruit turn out a dismal failure and a total loss. Fortunes have been spent on players who starred in the sticks, but couldn't make the grade in the big show. But an even greater dread is the possibility of releasing a young player who will, later on, develop into a luminary for a rival club.

To guard against losing any live ones in that manner, the Cardinal bosses will put into practice this spring a new system of passing judgment on recruit timber. They will assemble at their training camp the managers, scouts and presidents of all their chain stores, and before any rookie is turned loose, his case will come before this board. The player will not be allowed to get away unless every member of the council votes for his release. One dissenting ballot will be sufficient to keep him on the St. Louis roster.

COACHING OFFER TOO LOW FOR SISLER

It develops that Grover Hartley, dropped by the Pirates as a coach, would not have succeeded in catching on with the Browns in a similar capacity if the owners of the latter club had been more liberal in the terms they offered previously to George Sisler, former star first baseman and twice batting champion of the American League. Sisler wanted to come back to the majors in a coaching role, and the Browns desired his services, but the veteran turned down the offer tendered because accepting it would have meant too much of a financial sacrifice.

George Sisler

Sisler says he had several innovations to suggest to the owners of the St. Louis Americans if they had made him a worth while proposition. He did not figure on merely hitting fungoes in practice or just saying "Atta boy" on the coaching lines, but thought he could be of real help to Manager Hornsby in schooling and developing the younger players on the squad. Sisler can make more money out of his varied other interests in St. Louis. He is a partner in a printing company; has a share in a sporting goods house, and besides sponsors a 12-club soccer league, a 36-club basketball circuit and a soft ball league.

YEAR-ROUND PROMOTION INJURES BOXING

While no one can be blind to the disastrous effects of the shady operations of unscrupulous managers and fighters, fixed or fake bouts, diving acts, poor match-making, bad decisions, letting star boxers pick their opponents, and a number of other unsavory things that could be mentioned, it must be admitted, too, that over-promotion has had much to do with the slump in fistic interest and gate receipts. In Pittsburgh and elsewhere the glove sport has felt the effects of year-round going. In New York, for instance, boxing has been carried on for 52 weeks in the year ever since the Walker law went into effect. Naturally, the public is fed up and jaded.

Boxing needs a closed season and a breathing spell occasionally, like any other game. As one veteran observer asks, how would baseball draw if the clubs played 365 days a year? Would college football attract those huge crowds if the weather were cool enough throughout the year to make possible the playing of games every Saturday? How long would hockey continue to pack them in if there were games every week throughout the 12 months? It isn't hard to find the answer. Every other major sport has a closed season, with the result that the fans are hungry for it again after a layoff. Holidays would benefit boxing, too.

CHANGED CONDITIONS SPEED UP RUNNING

Homer Baker, half-mile champion 20 years ago, refuses to compare the present-day runners with those of the past, but contends that the human race is no faster than it was a generation ago, that better records are due only to improved track conditions and a different attitude on the part of the athletes. He believes that Mel Sheppard, running at his best today, would be among the leading half-milers, and that Abel Kiviat, if in his prime, could run with the best milers.

Mel Sheppard

Baker recalls that races were run differently when he was at his peak in 1913-14. At that time, he says, a man always ran against his opponent, never taking eyes off him. The only object was to win, but today the object is to beat the clocks. Agreeing that styles and methods are different now, other track experts trace the change to Paavo Nurmi after the war. The flying Finn introduced the present method of running the mile. He ran against the watch and not against an opponent. Just like a golfer who shoots against par instead of against an opponent's score in match play. Bobby Jones played match golf as Nurmi ran races. Paavo paced himself perfectly, carrying a stop watch on his practice runs to develop his pace. He knew precisely how fast he had to travel to beat the field, and that is how he ran. Opponents could not make him change that pace, regardless of what they tried. He knew he would get them in the end at his own pace, and he did. He left all the man-to-man runners of the old school in the rear by his fast early quarters, and his success caused other speeders to change their methods.

DUKES' BOXERS FACE BISONS; TECH BOWS

By JESS CARVER

What has been a none too brilliant local intercollegiate boxing campaign slips into the discard here tonight as the varsity punchers of Duquesne and Bucknell meet in an Intercollegiate Boxing Conference match in the Dukes' gymnasium. Bolstering the scheduled seven-bout varsity program will be seven final battles of the Duquesne intra-mural tournament.

Several cancellations, including the withdrawal of Carngie Tech team from competition, just about ruined the college scrapping hereabouts for the season.

MOORE FACES HUGHES

With Ed Carr, Capt. Freddie Moore, Nee and Chappela in trim, the Dukes are favored to take the decision from the Bisons in tonight's meeting, but not without plenty of trouble. Capt. Moore, the conferenee 145-pound champion, boxes Hughes, of Bucknell, in what looms as the feature tussle of the evening. The lineup for both varsity and intra-mural competition follows:

VARSITY BOUTS

115 pounds—McMahon, Dukes, vs. Mills, Bucknell.
125 pounds—Carr, Dukes, vs. Dill, Bucknell.
135 pounds—Pfansmith, Dukes, vs. Berley, Bucknell.
145 pounds—Moore, Dukes, vs. Hughes, Bucknell.
155 pounds—Roseto, Dukes, vs. Lauerman, Bucknell.
165 pounds—Nee, Dukes, vs. Kubacki, Bucknell.
175 pounds—Chapala, Dukes, vs. Pethick, Bucknell.

INTRA-MURAL BOUTS

115 pounds—Shearin vs. Ondrish.
125 pounds—Jordin vs. Kirk.
135 pounds—Madden vs. Parent.
145 pounds—Getty vs. Pronko.
155 pounds—Malitovsky vs. Cullen.
165 pounds—Mulvey vs. Hall.
175 pounds—Daily vs. Laputka.

TECH FIVE TROUNCED

Carnegie Tech's varsity basketballers missed the boat again last night and missed it by plenty. Opposing Duquesne's crack quintet (two quintets, as a matter of fact), the Skibos wound up on the short end of a 56-to-17 count, the victory enabling Duquesne to split the season honors with Pitt with three victories and one defeat.

It was nine minutes before Tech could even score against the Dukes, and by that time the Red and Blue had rolled up 18 big points. Tech didn't garner a field goal during the first half and trailed, 36 to 3, at the intermission.

George Silverman finally tossed a two-pointer for the Plaid three minutes after the second period got under way, and later on, Spisak flipped two and Gibson and Rigg each added one.

Feldman and Dudey Moore tied for high individual scoring honors with 11 points apiece. Ten of the 11 men used by the Dukes scored, Joe Zerilla being the only one to miss connecting for a point.

In the prelim, the Duquesne Freshmen nosed out the Skibo Plebes, 32 to 30. The lineups:

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: 1,525 WALKING RACES—The photo from which I sketched the famous walker, James A. Graham, was made at the start of his Toronto-to-New York walk, when he broke the existing record of 11 days, 22 hours. Graham's time was 7 days, 2 hours. Another record of which he is particularly proud is his walk from Rochester, N. Y., to Niagara Falls in 16 hours, 55 minutes. According to his accurately kept accounts, Graham has taken part in 1,525 races and has walked more than 13 times around the world! He now makes his home in Buffalo, N. Y. WATER, WATER—Few people ever think of the problem of water supply at a lighthouse, but in Los Angeles Harbor it was serious enough for someone to calculate that it was cheaper for the men to be supplied with water from San Francisco than from just across the harbor in San Pedro. The reason is that the Lighthouse Maintenance ship from San Francisco Carries tons of fresh water in its tank for ballast, and it is less expensive to pump water from the vessel on its periodic calls than it is to ship the much-needed aqua pura out only a few miles from the port which the lighthouse protects.

TOMORROW: THE MAKING OF A MAN.

MONONGAHELA PAIRED WITH MAPLETOWN

By JULIUS LEVIN

Eleven survivors in the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League's basketball elimination series conclude their first week of play tonight when two more sectional titleholders are scheduled to fall by the wayside, leaving only nine contenders to usher in the second week of tournament competition next Tuesday night when New Kensington, champion of Section I, and Ford City, champion of Section VI, meet in the Pitt Stadium pavilion. This contest marks the first game of the current eliminations to be played in the Panthers' court, the first eight battles being staged on high school floors.

Ray Henry

BRENTWOOD IN TEST

Brentwood High School, champion of Section XII, stakes its hopes for the championship on the outcome of its battle tonight with Duquesne, champion of Section VII, and one of the favorites to reach the final round, at Wilkinsburg High School floor. Brentwood, making its first appearance in the tournament on Tuesday, defeated McDonald, champion of Section XIV, 19-15, in a first-round game. Duquesne, defending league champion, is making its first start in the current eliminations.

Anther sectional champion which was successful in its first-round battle makes its second start of the eliminations when Mapletown, champion of Section XIII and victor over East Pike Run Tuesday at Carmichaels, 28-25, tangles with Monongahela, champion of Section V, at Donora High School.

Duquesne, coached by Ray Henry, looms as a real barrier to Brentwood in its fight for the W. P. I. A. L. title. The Henry-coached team chalked up eight successive victories in Section VII with little or no trouble and won all but two of its non-league contests. Rankin and the Duquesne University Freshies holding victories over the defending titleholder. Brentwood, however, made an impressive showing in its first tournament game and will prove a real opponent for the Steelers.

MONONGAHELA STRONG

In pairing off with Monongahela, coached by Tuffy McMillan, former Wilkinsburg High and Pitt star, Mapletown will be faced with tougher opponent than that opposed it on Tuesday. While it is true that Monongahela suffered three reverses in league competition, the McMillan-coached team hails from one of the toughest basketball sections in the W. P. I. A. L. McMillan, himself, is a former member of a championship team, having played for Wilkinsburg when that team won the title in 1922.

SOUTH WINS FIRST

The annual playoff series for the City League championship may be wound up next Tuesday afternoon, with the defending champions, South High School, again ruling the roost. The South passers gained a big edge in the annual three-game series by defeating Perry, Section II challenger, 33 to 27, in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion yesterday afternoon. Another win for the Orioles next week and the series will be over.

Ed Spotovich, brilliant center star, led the attack for the South outfit, which was out in front al

Durso, McFarland In 10-Round Bout

Promoter Jim McGirr has completed his card for his boxing show in the Palisades Arena, McKeesport, next Monday night, by signing Johnny Durso, local lightweight, to box Jackie McFarland, of Canton, O., in the first 10-round bout. Frankie Wolfram, of Winnipeg, and Nat Litfin, of the Hill, are in the 10-round windup.

Andy Maskey, of Canton, and Farmer Bill Schwerin, of Clairton, box a six-rounder, and Nick Malloy, local amateur heavyweight champion, turns pro against Tom Hanson, of Homestead, in a four-rounder.

Bill Nichy, North Side middleweight, boxes Richie Wobsor in a four-round bout in Cleveland, Monday night.

Cochet Gets Win Over Bill Tilden

MONTREAL, March 3.—(AP.)—Henri Cochet finally has broken the spell woven by Big Bill Tilden's magic tennis racket.

Beaten three times in a row by the tall Philadelphian since he turned professional, Cochet put on a dazzling exhibition of shotmaking last night as he whipped Tilden, 7-9, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2, 6-2, in the final match of the third Franco-American professional team series.

Cochet's victory couldn't save the French from their third successive team defeat, for Ellsworth Vines, lean Californian, had clinched the series for the Americans earlier in the evening with a straight set 10-8, 6-4, 6-3 triumph over Martin Plaa.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Nogales, Ariz.—Sammy Mandell knocked out Tommy Elks, 2 rounds; Billy Celebron knocked out Romo Garcia, 3 rounds.

At Milwaukee — Frankie Battaglia knocked out Paul Pirrone, 1 round; Bily Miller and Frankie Misko drew, 8 rounds; Tait Littman defeated Karl Ogren, 8 rounds; Frankie Cheek defeated Art Mitchell, 4 rounds.

Panther Mat Team Wins Over Jackets

WAYNESBURG, Pa., March 3.—The University of Pittsburgh's varsity wrestling team defeated the Waynesburg College grapplers, 16 to 12, here last night.

118-pound class—Chalfant, Waynesburg, defeated Thiesen, Pitt, by time advantage of 7 minutes 39 seconds.
125-pound class—Bradley, Waynesburg, defeated Hinchberger, Pitt, by time advantage of 7 minutes 40 seconds.

The Indoor Polo League race reaches a critical stage tonight, with the league-leading 107th Field Artillery poloists meeting the 308th Cavalry riders at Hunt Armory.

So slim is the Artillery's lead that a setback will prove costly, probably to the extent of surrendering all equity in the trophy.

The Cavalrymen are out for revenge on a large scale, mindful of the 8-to-4¾ lacing administered by the Artillerymen early in the season and visioning a possible crack at the title in the event of a post-season playoff. The lineup:

FRENCH CONFERS WITH BUC PRESIDENT ON SALARY TERMS

PIRATES GET FIRST WORKOUT IN CAMP

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 3.—Opening practice in the training camp of the Pirates was overshadowed by the arrival of Larry French, lefthanded ace of the pitching staff, who hesitated about affixing his name to a new contract until he could satisfy himself that the economic program of the big leagues could not be overlooked in his case.

French talked with President William E. Benswanger over the telephone from the southpaw's home in Brentwood Park, on the outskirts of Los Angeles. The outcome of this conversation, in which Larry expressed a willingness to hold a heart-to-heart chat and President Benswanger, always ready to hear an employe's tale of woe, was an invitation for the Iron Man to take a run to Hot Springs Hotel if he wished, and possibly they might come to an understanding.

Larry accepted and soon was at the wheel of his big car. He arrived last evening and joked with some of his comrades. Benswanger, Gibson, Wagner and Doc Crandall all welcomed the prodigal. After dinner, French was ushered into Benswanger's suite and the two discussed the salary subject from all angles. Larry seemed to think his 18 victories should entitle him to more than a depression salary, to say nothing of his 13 defeats. He also based his estimated value on the fact that his earned run average was under three per game.

French usually reports in the spring with considerable superfluous weight, but at present he is 25 pounds lighter than he was one year ago when he tipped the scales at 205. He is almost at his normal playing weight and is anxious to get out on the field and prepare for the pennant fight.

Two practice sessions under a warm sun were held yesterday. The morning exercises did not start on scheduled time, due to the presence of a group of movie and talkie photographers who had coaxed Gibby to grant them a brief interval in which to turn their lenses and microphones upon the ball players.

Most of the practice was devoted to limbering up the muscles, getting the legs into action and indulging in some bunting, fly-chasing and batting.

Buckeyes' New Coach

FRANCIS A. SCHMIDT . . . . FROM TEXAS CHRISTIAN U.

Here is the man who has been named to succeed Sam Willaman as the head football coach at Ohio State University for three years, beginning next fall. He has compiled a fine record. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

STEVENS NAMED NEW COACH AT NEW YORK U.

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—Dr. Marvin A. (Mal) Stevens, of Yale, is the new head football coach at New York University.

A member of Yale's coaching staff for 10 years from 1924 through 1933 and head coach of the Elis from 1928 through 1932, Stevens will succeed Howard (Jake) Cann at N. Y. U. Cann resigned on February 1 under fire of undergraduate and alumni criticism after the Violets had won only two games, tied one and lost four last season. He retained his post as basketball coach, however.

Now an interne at New Haven Hospital, Stevens will take charge of football affairs on University Heights as soon as weather conditions permit the start of spring practice.

NO AIDES NAMED

No assistant coaches have as yet been named, but it was announced the full staff would be selected before the start of spring practice.

The announcement of Stevens' selection last night was made by Dr. Philip O. Badger, chairman of the Board of Athletic Control, and himself a Yale man.

The team will play an eight-game schedule next season with major contests against Fordham, Lafayette, Carnegie Tech, Rutgers and Georgetown. The schedule follows:

October 6, Johns Hopkins at Ohio Field; 13, West Virginia Wesleyan at Ohio Field; 20, Lafayette at Yankee Stadium; 27, Georgetown at Yankee Stadium; November 3, Carnegie Tech at Yankee Stadium; 10, City College of New York at Ohio Field; 17, Rutgers at New Brunswick; 29 (Thanksgiving), Fordham at Yankee Stadium.

O. S. U. SIGNS SCHMIDT

COLUMBUS, O., March 3.—(AP.)—A tall, bronzed, 200-pound Nebraskan, Francis A. Schmidt, has been appointed director of football at Ohio State University for the next three years.

The coach of Texas Christian University comes to the Buckeye school committed to a policy of versatile football. As the third Ohio State coach in the last 21 years, Schmidt broke all precedent in obtaining a three-year contract. Sam Willaman, who resigned a month ago, and Dr. J. W. Wilce, who quit five years ago to make way for Willaman, worked through 20 years under year-by-year contracts.

ARNOLD MEETS EDGEWOOD FOR A.-K. TITLE

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., March 3.—The Edgewood and Arnold High School basketball teams will clash tonight for the championship in the annual Allegheny-Kiski Valley scholastic tournament.

Edgewood became the favorite last night when the maroon-clad cagemen ran roughshod over Springdale to earn a 36-15 triumph.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Primo Carnera had two offers yesterday to use his punch to puncture cream puffs for a Broadway caterer . . . Since he won the title from Jack Sharkey he has fought the badly battered Paulino Uzcudun and the faded Tommy Loughran and has failed to score a knockout in 30 rounds . . . And they called him the Man Killer after poor Ernie Schaaf collapsed against him and later died . . . The Paulino and Loughran fights, showing up Carnera's lack of a knockout punch, bear out the assertions following the Sharkey fight that Jack appeared to "chuck it" after piling up a big lead in the first five rounds . . . He stuck out his head and waited for the uppercut from which he dropped for the count.

The only consolation the Garden interests got out of staging the Big Bust battle in Miami was that it outdrew the horse show, pinochle tournament, shuffleboard pageant and all of those other events which threatened to crowd it out.

The Dukes' graduating basketball players are looking ahead to playing independently at the end of the season and one of the teams they want to meet is the Cleveland Rosenblum-Celtics outfit . . . The Dukes' play is patterned somewhat after the Celtics' style because Coach Chick Davies is an old independent star and teaches the game accordingly.

This fellow Francis A. Schmidt, who has been named as the coaching target for the Ohio State alumni for the next three years, is held in high esteen in the South, where he has built up a fine record. . . . He must have something for the Buckeyes to pick him out of a crowd.

Bill Swift has rewritten the marriage song. . . .As he sings it to the Pirates' front office, it goes, "Oh Com-promise Me." . . . . The late John McGraw, in a post-humous article in Liberty, writes that the most dramatic game in his experience was the playoff battle with the Cubs for the 1908 pennant following the Merkle incident. . . . They can't win games on the road, but they are poison to all and sundry at home, are these Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets of the American and International Lacrosse Association.

Back home after a somewhat disastrous invasion of Chicago, during which they lost both games played with the Wind City franchise holders, the Blue Ribbons and White Sox, the Jackets last night turned the tables on the former in a struggle at Motor Square Garden. The locals won, 13 to 12, by virtue of a last period attack that netted four goals to the opposition's three.

Chicago held a 7-to-3 lead at the end of the second period, but the Jackets knotted the count in the third stanza by scoring six goals to two for the Ribbons. Then came the hectic final period and the victory for the locals.

A group of spectators, who apparently had looked upon the wine when it was a trifle too red, enlivened the proceedings with a fight. The riotous ones were ejected by the police. The lineup:

N. CASTLE, AMBRIDGE WIN

New Castle and Ambridge advanced a round in the annual W. P. I. A. L. championship elimination tournament last night, while East Pittsburgh, victor in its first-round game, was eliminated in the second round by Uniontown.

Playing at New Castle, Phil Bridenbaugh's crack array walloped Union Township, 45 to 18. New Castle took things easy against the Union passers, ringing up 20 field goals against seven for its opponents. Reiber, New Castle captain, scored nine goals and one foul for a total of 19 points.

At Beaver Falls, Ambridge, clever and fast as ever, downed Leetsdale, 31 to 11, the Bridge Workers' attack being led by big Johnny Michelosen, who bagged six field goals and one foul for 13 points. So tight was the Ambridge defense that Leetsdale was limited to two field goals.

UNIONTOWN VICTOR

East Pittsburgh enjoyed a slight edge at the end of the first half of its tussle with Uniontown, played at Monessen, but the fast passing of the Uniontowners proved the undoing of the Coleman-coached five in the third period and enabled Uniontown to forge ahead. The final score was 42 to 35.

Handball and squash racquet tussles of importance comprise this afternoon's club sports bill as Class A glovemen of the City Loop open the second installment of their title playoff round robin, and racquet performers continue quest of the City Class B crown. The handball championship affair likewise is slated for the K. A. C. bailiwick, with Downtown Y. M. C. A. seeking to retrieve in a battle with the Y. M. H. A., ground lost in the initial bracket of the post-season series last Sunday. Only a portion of the contest will be staged today, the remainder to be run off on the morrow. Five third frame struggles are on the squash racquets card.

Theos Manos and Jean Caspar of the home organization, and Rod Flannery, of the P. A. A., already have progressed to the quarter-final canto. Manos attained the round of eight at expense of his clubmate, Ad Schmidt, 15-13, 15-13, 18-16, in the only tussle accounted for yesterday.

Following today's matches, the racquet conclave will hibernate till next Friday, when quarter-finals will be featured in connection with the opening of the three-day exhibition classic bringing together Jack Summers, national professional champion, and Ben Pope, crack instructor of the K. A. C.

Athletic Director Art Scher, of the Y. M. H. A., calls attention to the fact that the A. M. A., A. A. U. junior handball championships will be held on the Bellefield courts the week of March 12. Singles and doubles will be sponsored and entries will be handled by both Scher and John T. Taylor until Saturday, March 10.

Although distanced by the J. Scott Morgans and the Pirates in the race for the championship, the H. J. Webers can clinch third place in the City Hockey League by defeating Duquesne University's skaters in their league game at Duquesne Garden tonight.

For the Bluffites, the only opportunity which the game presents is a chance to break into the victory column, but this chance is rather forlorn. The Webers took the measure of the powerful Morgans for the second straight time in their last start, and Frank Curl, their ace goalie, appears to be becoming more effective with each passing fray. The Dukes have scored only three goals in three games, and they hardly figure to give the Webers' stonewall defense any great amount of trouble tonight. The probable lineup:

STOCK MARKET MAKES SLIGHT ADVANCE

NEW YORK, March 3.—Stocks tilted slightly forward in the early dealings today. Trading dwindled after a brisk opening. Retail store shares were improved.

J. C. Penney advanced more than a point. Fractional improvement was shown by Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward Western Union, Santa Fe, General Motors and Goodyear. American Can and United States Steel ruled unchanged while American Telephone eased a small fraction.

Foreign exchanges did little in early transactions. Sterling was 3/8 of a cent higher at $5.07⅞ and French francs recorded fractional improvement at 6.58 cents.

Wall street's eyes appeared to be diverted, at least for the moment, from the Washington scene by further good news from industrial fronts. In addition to the unexpected declaration of a higher dividend by General Electric, the Sears Roebuck report for the company's past fiscal year, showing substantial profits compared with a large 1932 loss, was seen as another indication of economic recovery.

There were many conjectures as to the outcome of next week's NRA convention at the capital. The importance of the President's forthcoming address to the 3,500 delegates was stressed in brokerage circles. Just how far the authorities will go in the campaign for a reduction of working hours and the increase of wages was a matter of discussion.

ELECTRIC'S NET 38c A SHARE

NEW YORK, March 3.—The General Electric Company has declared a dividend of 15 cents on the common stock, payable April 25 to record March 16. Previously the company paid 10 cents on the common.

The company also declared the regular quarterly dividend of 15 cents on the special stock, payable April 25 to record March 16.

The company reports for the year 1933 net income of $13,429,739, after depreciation, interest, federal taxes, etc., equal, after dividends on the special stock, to 38 cents a share on 28,845,927 shares of common stock. This compares with net of $14,404,110, or 41 cents a common share in 1932.

Sales billed in the fourth quarter of 1933 totaled $39,211,122, against $34,112,816 in the final quarter of 1932.

Directors will recommend to stockholders at the annual meeting on April 17, approval of a profit-sharing plan, which embraces all employes, and on which executives of the company have been working for some years.

I. C. C. ADJUSTS ERIE COAL RATE

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today issued an order forbidding railroads from hauling coal to industries at Lake Erie ports at the reduced rates allowed on coal destined for trans-shipment by boat across the lakes.

The order was issued by the commission on application of the railroads themselves. It was designed to stop industries from getting the lake rate when the extent of the water haul on their coal was a short barge haul.

The application asked that the commission declare the lake cargo coal rates applicable only on traffic west of the Straits of Mackinac and Sault Ste. Marie and east of Lake Erie on Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River.

The commission's order, however, specified that the rates should not apply to ports of trans-shipment or between ports of trans-shipment and dismissed that portion of the application arbitrarily fixing the destination area.

LARGER BUYERS ENTER STEEL MARKET

By B. E. V. LUTY

The latest developments in the steel trade are the addition of two customers taking substantial tonnages, the railroads and the farm implement industry, the beginning of important demand by the electric industry and the refrigerator industry, and a continuance of increase in total steel production.

The official forecast for this week represented steel ingot production at 45.7 per cent of capacity, showing 2.1 points rise in one week, 5.8 points in two weeks and 11.3 points in four weeks. On account of mills exceeding schedules, actual production in the week may be estimated at about 47 per cent. In tonnage output this is 72 per cent above the average last November, 20 per cent under last July and 175 per cent over the rate of precisely one year ago.

These comparisons are made to show how uninformative some comparisons can be. A year ago all business was in a dip due to the bank troubles, while last summer there was a phenomenal bulge in steel demand in anticipation of higher prices and costs due to codes then in prospect, and the bottom of the subsequent dip fell in November, when there was liquidation of stocks of steel and manufacturers of steel and the automobile industry was at a low point, between models, and using stocks of steel for what little production it had.

DEMAND ANALYZED

A more illuminating study is made by analyzing current demand by sources and considering prospects of various consuming lines. With production of steel ingots at 47 per cent, 10 to 12 points, not more, may be assigned to the automobile industry, a close estimate being impossible because on the one hand stocks of some classes of steel are not exhausted, while on the other hand there is anticipation of heavier operation. Fabricated structural steel work has been quite steady for two years and accounts for no more than two points. So far there has been little production of railroad steel although there has been a marked increase and there is prospect of much larger tonnage. Only three to five points in this week's steel production need be assigned to the railroads.

With the dedication indicated there is left approximately a 30 per cent operation of the steel industry for all other outlets. This represents a rate of 20,000,000 to 21,000,000 tons of ingots a year, or 45 per cent of total average production in the very active period of seven years through 1929, when these miscellaneous lines were not taking a great deal more steel than now.

PRODUCERS GRATIFIED

The widespread character of the demand is a healthy and promising symptom. Steel producers are gratified by the totals when there is so little buying of conspicuous size. There is too much detail to permit them to analyze, but the common view is that merely current consumption is involved, that little or nothing is being done thus far in connection with the arrearages in repair and maintenance work that have been accumulating for at least two years.

Farm implement factories are working at close to capacity on tillage machinery, chiefly because they were conservative and delayed getting into active production. The electric refrigerator industry is beginning its season, which usually runs to July 1, but extended much longer last year. There is demand from makers of road building equipment but so far no substantial demand for concrete reinforcing bars for road work. The electric industry generally has just begun to buy steel more freely.

TIN MILLS AT 60 PER CENT

With all the prospect there has been of railroad buying, orders and specifications for actual rolling have been disappointingly slow in reaching the mills. It is still uncertain how much of the original Eastman program involving purchases of 845,000 tons of rails will be carried out. Rail production is at a low rate, but a moderate tonnage of track material and of steel for rolling stock is being made.

For the third week the tin plate mills have run at a rate of 60 per cent, doing much better than was expected in view of the heavy stocking of tin plate and cans late in the old year. Some of the present production is against specifications recently distributed by a large can maker, delivery of part of the tonnage to be released later.

The scrap market has gotten into a complicated situation on account of the weather, river shipments being interrupted, probably for several weeks.

PRIEST CITES WAR THREAT

There is no justification for war except actual invasion of a nation's borders, the Rev. Dr. Michael J. Brannigan, vice president of Duquesne University, yesterday told members of the Women's Guild of the university. He said:

"There cannot be too much portrayal of the horrors of war. I am in favor of the pictures of war's horrible toll that have been appearing in the newspapers.

"Modern warfare is something far different than the warfare of earlier centuries. There was a time when certain rules of warfare could be enforced. In the last war every existing rule was broken. Now we must take war as it actually is, with poison gas and all its engines of destruction.

"If nations go to war today they will wipe each other out. That's a fine solution for any problem. I see another war as a real probability and I believe it may mean the complete destruction of our civilization."

GERMAN FLAYS HITLER 'EMPIRE'

Hitler and his "third empire" were pictured as a menace to European peace by Dr. Herbert Stahl, former secretary to the head of the Reichsbank, in an address before the Foreign Policy Association in the Hotel Schenley last night.

Dr. Robert Valeur, instructor of comparative international economics at Columbia, who shared the speaking program with Dr. Stahl, asserted no cordial relations could exist between Germany and France until the latter was assured of an equal international economic footing with Germany.

Dr. Stahl was imprisoned six hours after Hitler became chancellor for his editorial denouncing the Fascist movement. Of the Hitler program he said:

"It is neither an outlet to Germany's economic aims, nor a guaranty to European peace."

Dr. Stahl added that German industry and commerce are declining. He said nine million have joined the unemployed ranks, and pointed out the profits of the producer have grown while those of the consumer have decreased.

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER VIII.

Powdered and glowing, their fingernails a bright Chinese red, Pippin and Kathleen swept into the room. Pippin was in sapphire blue; the dark Kathleen in flaming crimson. They were trying on their new dresses so that Lucy, Mary's oldest sister, might see them in their glory.

Lucy's face tightened as they entered, but Mary and Chickie were blind with pride and love.

Said Kathie, regarding her aunt with impish joy:

"Lucy, do we stagger you? And, look — backless! Aren't we risque?"

"Yes, quite."

"You don't seem to like us."

"You meant to stagger me. You have. I don't know what to say when girls of 16 are allowed to wear suggestive gowns like this."

"How do you want us to dress? We have to follow the styles, don't we?"

"You don't need to follow a style suitable for Sapho. When you're 40 there'll be nothing more sophisticated."

"Oh, do we look sophisticated? That's what we love?"

The two girls caught hands and ran from the room. They tried to carry it off flippantly. Both were near to tears. This made Mary bristle. She glared at her sister.

"You didn't need to take them down like that! You went to dances when you were 15. You dressed in the style of your day. I remember the domino party at the Coglans. Mother sat up half the night making your costume. You were just 15."

"When I was 15, Mary, you were five. You could hardly remember my debut. I went to a few house parties, where we had lemonade and cake and were always home by 10:30."

"But don't forget, Lucy, all the boys in the neighborhood were present. You played post-office, drop the pillow and plenty of other kissing games. You didn't call it 'necking' as these frank kids do. What else was it?"

"Because they're frank about their 'petting,' is it any the less dangerous?"

"Lucy, don't be a smug idiot! They've probably had a kiss apiece, which is no more than I had at 16 or you, either. You act as though Chickie and I were campaigning for bigger and better petting parties."

"Well, you're certainly dressing them in clothes that invite familiarity . . . backless and sexy and made to show every line of their figures."

Feels Audacious

Chickie could wilt before an attack like this. The blue gown was the first Pippin had ever bought alone. She felt audacious and grown-up with that low back and long sweeping line. Hadn't dreamed of other things. Now she would fold into herself in the way she had when troubled. Chickie would be powerless to erase her hurt. She felt grievously to blame.

"Don't get excited about it," Mary interposed, her voice sharp, but her eyes warm with all that old love between them. "Their life is their own. Even to spoil. Mother said that. I'll to live Kathleen's. And e Pippin alone, Chickie. l right—and she'll stay to the end of the road."

"Sure she'll stay all right, but why the flag waving?"

At the deep, masculine voice, Mary's face lighted. She walked across the room to meet her oldest son, Edward, who now entered from the hall. Mary looked like her mother with a richness, even a majesty, in her eyes as she greeted the boy.

Edward was like Jimmy in Chickie's girlhood, but heavier and a little forbidding. He was 25. He followed in his father's steps and was a chemist.

Chickie remembered Edward from the time he was a pink, roguish baby lying in Mary's lap. Mary was a girl then. And Chickie was a girl, running down to the old dilapidated house in Fair Oaks, all excited and wanting Martha Blake's opinion. Was it right to kiss? Just one or two? And who was the "Blessed Damozel?"

Ghostly Yesterdays

When Chickie looked at Edward, strong, dominant, man-grown, the past seemed ghostly. Sometimes she wondered if it was a dream—all that about having a child and another love but David.

Chickie could laugh with Mary over Edward's stern, uncompromising youth. But they loved him dearly and wanted his approval.

He was the big brother of the family and laid down the law for the younger girls with a vigor their fathers wouldn't have dared. He caught them and roughly wiped rouge from their mouths, threatening dire vengeance if they painted themselves like chorus girls.

Edward gave secret advice to Chickie and Mary. He cautioned them against their stupidity in raising daughters. He refused, however, to allow anyone but himself to make Mary unhappy. Now sensing her tumult, he said:

"Who's boiled in oil today?"

"Lucy doesn't approve of Kathleen's new party dress."

"You didn't expect her to, did you? Do you suppose any sane person could approve of Kath- gowns? But don't worry, er, I'm watching that kid and I'm watching Pippin. They'll have to be pretty slick to get by with any quick step while I'm on deck. Where are they?"

It made Edward impatient to have Lucy criticize his charges. He could be very ferocious with the young girls himself, but he wanted everyone else to consider them lovely, radiant, perfect. He sought them now in Kathleen's room.

Offers Advice

Pippin tossed her head in the sharp, birdlike way she had.

"You don't mean to tell me you were crying about it?"

"Hear him, Kathleen! Were we crying? Can you bear that pathetic picture?"

"You were, though. Lucy Adams has her nerve coming here and telling Mary where to head in after the family of dumbbells she brought forth."

They still wore the sophisticated satin evening gowns which provoked Lucy's censure. Edward walked across the room and twirled Pippin about. His teeth snapped:

"It's a darn sight too low."

"I didn't create the style. I suppose you'd have us wear ruffles and organdy and assume the 'girl in the garden' look."

"Darn right I would! Let me tell you, Miss Pippin, it's just as stupid to be sophisticated at 16 as to be coy and flirtatious at 40. You make fun of Evelyn Hackett because she acts like 20. I heard you call her 'the perennial debutante.' Can't you see you really destroy yourself when you ape middle-age? What they would give for that 'girl in the garden' look! You're dumbbells! You don't capitalize the one charm age can never imitate."

"Why don't you change the world, grandpa? What can we do about it? Everyone wears smart clothes today."

"Smart? That's just what you're not. There's no lure in bald advertisements. Anyone knows charm is enhanced by suggestion. Even Salome had art enough to use seven veils.

"But look at the pair of you! No mystery. Nothing for the imagination. Every curve revealed. It's a burning shame and the judgment of God will fall on the race."

"But Edward, darling, you're not advocating more purity and restraint, but less. You say we should leave things to the imagination—tease you along. Is that very moral?"

"I'm not advocating morality, Pippin, but common sense. Youth is your precious gift. Why dress like a world-weary demi-monde?"

"That's a bad word, Edward! And heaven knows, the evening dress of men is insane. Why don't you be a free soul, Eddie, and appear at the Eilers wedding in a Roman tunic?"

They giggled and pretended to be hard and untouched. Both were crushed and ready to tear the offending frocks to bits.

That night Pippin wrote a long, pitiful letter.

"Why do people spoil the world, Kevin? It could be so wondrous grand. What is there wrong in a clean, strong back like mine that they grew so angry with us? You wouldn't, would you? Oh, Kevin, I'm so lonely for you. We need you terribly. If it wasn't for you I'd want to die tonight, things seem so sad. I'm glad you gave me your picture. I look at it and know the glory is real. Be good, Kevin, darling, and I will, too."

Synopsis

Pippin, pretty daughter of Chickie, and Kathie McPike laughingly appeal to Kathie's foster-brother, Kevin Malone, to take them to their first dance. Kevin promises. Then, teased by the two girls because he is eight years older than they, he seizes Pippin and kisses her. Pippin goes home to her mother to secure permission to go to the dance, astonished and thrilled at the first real kiss she had ever known. Given permission, Pippin attends the dance with Kevin and has a glorious time. Chickie thinks her daughter has gone into the strange land of adolescence too soon. Kevin sails to Europe and his first letter thrills Pippin. Pippin meets a handsome young ensign, Bill Lodge, at a ship dance. She refuses to take a bracelet as a gift from him.

UNION RULES MISSISSIPPI EXCEPT 150 MILES "BRIDGE" OF CONFEDERATES—CIVIL WAR 1862

Courtesy of The Century Co. (Battles and Leaders of Civil War)

Commodore Farragut with a fleet of about 50 vessels starting from Fort Monroe (Va.) February, 1862, attacked the Confederate forts along the coast, Capturing Confederate vessels and subduing Forts Jackson and St. Philip (above), his camouflaged ships entered New Orleans by end of April, penetrating the Mississippi to Port Hudson. Gen. Butler, following with 15,000 troops, took command of New Orleans until close of war.

Down the Mississippi River sailed Union Commodore Davis toward Vicksburg after he had defeated the Confederate Commodore Montgomery at Memphis June 6, 1862 (above right). The Confederates held the stretch Vicksburg-Hudson on the Mississippi, the "Bridge," between their eastern and western territories for another year. Gens. Grant and Sherman were prominent commanders of Union land forces on western front.

BATTLE OF PLASSEY, START OF BRITISH SUPREMACY, INDIA

Economic needs largely induced European powers to seek colonies; political and religious issues were also decisive. In the Sixteenth Century the Spanish and Portuguese were at the zenith of their colonization, the Dutch followed in the Seventeenth, British and French then took the lead.

The foundation of British supremacy in India is assigned to their victory at Plassey (1757) over the French, allied with the Bengal ruler. The British commander was Robert Clive, connected with the British East India Company, which held a charter for trade privileges and certain territories in India. (World Hist.)

DESTRUCTION WROUGHT BY FOREST FIRE

Forest fire does direct damage by destroying trees, seeds, cattle, buildings, equipment and sometimes human life. Its indirect damage is unestimable. The death of trees opens the ground to sun and wind, which disintegrate humus. Leaching, erosion begins. Birds are driven away, insects, fungi thrive.

No forest means no water, no water means no agriculture. Then come flood, drought, pestilence and death. Everybody loses in a forest fire.

Be careful with fire in the forest. (Gen. Science)

SULPHUR DIOXIDE—TRIOXIDE

Sulphur dioxide (SO_2), a heavy, colorless gas, forming with water sulphurous acid (H_2SO_3), is made by burning sulphur or roasting pyrites. Above: Wise Sulphur-burner.

By heating SO_2 with O small quantities of sulphur—trioxide (SO_3) are obtained. To make this reaction more rapid and efficient, finely divided platinum or vanadium is used as catalyst (a substance accelerating chemical reaction without combining itself).

Right: Badische converter containing iron tubes packed with platinized asbestos works on this principle. SO_3, a colorless liquid (boiling pt. 44.52° C.), gives with water sulphuric acid: $SO_3 + H_2O = H_2SO_4$. (Chem.)

DEATH OF "NEMO"

In "Bleak House" Dickens depicts vividly the tragical consequences of youth's missteps aggravated by social prejudice, false pride and people's readiness to take advantage of them.

Esther, a fine young girl, reared by her aunt, becomes the companion of Ada, ward of John Jaryndice, and soon the confident of the whole household.

Their neighbors, Lord and Lady Dedlock are prominent aristocrats. Tulkinghorn, the lord's cunning lawyer, discovers the lady's "past;" that Esther is her daughter believed dead, and that Capt. Hawdon, father of Esther, died a pauper known as "Nemo." (English Literature)

NORMAL, NEAR- FARSIGHTED EYES

In normal eye the focus (F) of lens falls on retina giving a sharp image. In nearsighted (myopic) eye (F) it is in front of the retina. Causes—Abnormality of curves of refractive media (lens, cornea, or elongation of eyeball; in both cases a biconcave lens of suitable curvature increases the focal distance to reach the retina (F').

In farsighted (hyperopic) eye the focus falls behind the retina, due to flattened lens or cornea. This is corrected by proper biconvex lens. Corrected vision favorably influences physical, mental development, behavior of children. (Gen. Science)

Just a Light Spring War

When Russia and Japan both fear war, you know it is as mutual as hominy and grits.

It means that there are two hens sitting on one egg. And it will hatch in the spring.

The lads have fought once before, and Japan kicked the burly Cossacks around a 40-acre lot. This victory was more surprising than a laugh in an emergency ambulance.

Both on sea and on land, the armies and the navies were hamstrung, pulverized and otherwise coerced.

That made the rest of the world sit up and take information that was certainly not nourishment. A new power has arisen in the Orient.

Now when a nation says, "We fear war," that means something. Alonzo Stagg, of Chicago, always feared Purdue.

But history has no record of Alonzo ever canceling the game.

So we know the fears will proceed on schedule. The game will be played in the Manchurian Stadium. Say, that Korea place is getting to be an old Rose Bowl!

We hope the first battle will be a fierce one, because we like to listen to Floyd Gibbons' play-by-play description on the air.

We don't figure how America can be skullduggled into this thing, because neither side is fighting to save their homes, their nations and their flags.

They are going to fight for the queerest reason we every heard.

They are fighting because they hate each other.

Ain't that silly?

That violates all international agreements, crosses the frontiers of hypocritical diplomacy and grabs powers plenipotentiary by the ears.

This will be a long war. Multiply the hates, and you will get the answer in years. As they say in London, two hates are 16.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Muscles constitute nearly one-half the weight of the body. Keep them fit, in good condition, and life will be buoyant. Are you a doubting Tess? Don't be. Individuals with charm and magnetism nearly always have good muscles; there is a close bond between physical and mental well-being. Every day, no matter what the weather, how much work is to be done, get out of doors. If you don't you'll go stale and worry bugs will sting and vex you. Breathe deeply. Walk briskly. It will make for the continuance of youthful appearance.

The movies and the radio have made us voice conscious. This is an interesting subject to which the beauty quester gives less time than it merits. With a harsh or shrill voice a charming personality can be blighted. "Nice to look at, but terrible to listen to" is the verdict. In the court of beauty many voice crimes are committed. There are mumblers, whiners, droners, shriekers and shouters. Too bad, since a sweet voice is one of the major beauty blessings.

The dry skin is a common winter problem, due often to having the air in homes and office too warm and dry. Place water containers on radiators; the fluffing of dead skin scales will diminish to a marked degree. Keep the skin lubricated. Use a heavy massage cream every night. Remove makeup with a cleansing, oily liquid. Eat more butter on bread and vegetables. Rinse soap suds away with warm water; never use cold if the complexion is rough and chapped.

Not a Puppet

The People Can Sleep More Easily With a Police Chief Like Ben R. Marshall

*We take our hat off to Police Supt. Ben R. Mar-*shall for his bold refusal to be a puppet. On learning that a score of his detectives had been discharged by the Democratic high command without consulting him, Marshall declared he would resign before he would submit to further demoralization of his bureau. The people of Pittsburgh will be able to sleep more easily with a police chief like that.

One of the detectives discharged by the city for political reasons, Walter C. Monaghan, has the reputation of being an excellent officer. District Attorney Andrew T. Park promptly engaged him as a county detective. On administering the oath to Monaghan Judge Heber Dithrich remarked that the city's loss was the county's gain. With so efficient a sleuth on his staff, it is to be hoped Park will be better able hereafter to detect election frauds.

On September 14, 1931, on the eve of the primary election in which he was a candidate, District Attorney Park specifically pledged himself to prosecute violators of the election laws. Yet, for some reason—possibly because of the inefficiency of his county detectives—he took no action against the election crooks of November, 1932, scores of whom have since been convicted in the United States District Court.

Park said in his pre-election statement: "The honest ballot is the bulwark of American liberty. Interference with its unhampered use by the electorate attacks the sound fundamentals upon which this country and its institutions are firmly established." Yet, notwithstanding that the cry of fraud was raised immediately after the November, 1932, election, he failed to bring to justice any of the numerous election officials who falsified ballots.

"I shall always use every facility at my command," said Park, "to maintain its (the ballot's) integrity in accordance with my duties as a citizen, and as an officer of the Commonwealth with a sincere appreciation of the import of my oath of office." In the light of this pledge some word of explanation is surely due from the District Attorney for his failure to prosecute the men and women who have recently been convicted in the Federal Court.

Much credit is due Attorney Earl F. Reed and the very able Assistant United States Attorney, James I. Marsh, for the brilliant showing they have made in the election prosecutions. They did not have nearly the latitude that District Attorney Park would have had, had he chosen to prosecute; for they had to confine themselves to evidence involving the election of Congressmen, whereas Park would have had free scope to prosecute all kinds of election irregularities.

Mr. Marsh is a holdover from the administration of United States Attorney Louis Graham. He was too valuable man, it seems, to be dismissed for political reasons. The wisdom of his retention is shown by the splendid record he is making in the prosecution of the election officials. What a pity that Mayor W. N. McNair did not take a leaf from the federal Democratic administration's book and retain meritorious public officials, even if they are Republicans!

Favoritism, fraud and self-aggrandizement at the expense of the citizens and taxpayers, whether committed by Democratic or Republican politicians, are becoming very nauseous to the people of this community. The demand is that the spoils system shall be abolished and the merit system prevail. McNair must have shocked many of his most faithful followers by the unscrupulous way in which he has flouted the merit system in police and fire bureau changes.

What Pittsburgh needs, of course, is a business administration, in which business-like principles are applied to all branches of the municipal service. It may be that we cannot get such an administration without the city manager form of government. But it is to be hoped that at least a beginning may be made through the efficiency and economy survey that Council has asked the Western Pennsylvania Branch of the National Economy League to conduct.

If Mayor McNair gives his approval and pledges his co-operation—and he will be inconsistent if he does not—the Economy League plans to make just such a survey as was conducted with such good results in Baltimore, Baltimore, with a deficit of $2,300,000 in 1932, finished 1933 with a surplus of $974,000. This was accomplished by instituting improvements in economy and efficiency as recommended by a commission of businessmen.

Maj. Ezra B. Whitman, who was chairman of Baltimore's economy and efficiency commission, is now a resident of Pittsburgh, having come here as chief engineer of the West Penn Electric Company, and is co-operating with the National Economy League. William J. Casey, who was vice chairman of the Baltimore commission, is to tell of its work at a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce next Thursday. This co-operation should be of great assistance.

Council, we notice, is holding sessions from which the public is barred. These are said to be the first secret sessions in its history. They may be the first openly secret sessions; but we imagine it would be rather hazardous to wager that there have never been secret Councilmanic meetings of which not even newspaper reporters were aware. There may be justification for occasional private conferences, but Councilmen should not forget that they are public servants and that the business which they transact is public business.

*The Pennsylvania and Atlantic Seaboard Hard-*ware Association, Inc., is to be congratulated on the good sense shown in the resolution adopted at its convention here recommending the enactment of a national manufacturers' sales tax to replace the federal income tax. As the association said, "an income tax discourages industrial and commercial enterprise, lessens employment of labor, and thereby reduces payrolls and purchasing power."

The rivers have been frozen over this last week, for the first time in years. In tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, there is an interesting account of a great river of ice—a glacier—in the Swiss Alps in which two boys were lost 27 years ago. Their bodies have just been surrendered by the glacier.

Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, will show in pictures tomorrow a thrilling incident in the story of "Jungle Jim." There is excitement a-plenty also in the current installment of "Flash Gordon." These are both by Alexander Raymond. There are 30 comics in Puck—16 big, full size pages in four colors.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 3.—How small the world! On the way up to Cambodia the other week to see those astounding ruins at Angkor, Hamish and Aimee McLaurin were obliged to break the journey at a border village. On the slope of a stump-pocked ravine was a jerry-built rest house.

And who should turn out to be the manager but Tom Kuma, a Siamese acrobat, bender and slide-for-life artist who had played every vaudeville circuit in the U. S. And knew Broadway and Forty-seventh street as a night clerk in a hotel back of the Palace in the Gyp-the-Blood era.

There was a night in Pittsburgh when someone was careless with a rope in his slide-for-life and he missed! So he became a hotel clerk, parleyed a bet at Belmont with four winners in a row and there he is again in Siam providing a little breath of Broadway along a hidden byway to the jungle.

Then in the moonlight hush, broken only by some bestial scream, he told of his first Broadway appearance. It was Hammerstein's whose out front program was in order of appearance. Kuma topped W. C. Fields, Valeska Suratt and Elizabeth Murray. It was life's greatest disappointment to discover he wasn't a headliner.

More small world: There was the time Laura and Irvin Cobb, sailing for Marseilles, were billeted at a table with another married couple. Casual conversation developed into an exchange of addresses. They had occupied adjoining apartments on the same floor of a Riverside Drive apartment house for seven years. It further developed their respective beds were back to back on either side of the same wall. But they had never met.

Also: On a side-wheel excursion steamer paddling up the Rhine the summer of 1926 I fell in with a hardy old English colonial in the smoking room. He had been pegging down his flag in dinky far-flung outposts most of his life. He had never been to the States. "But some day," he said, "we may collide on your Fifth avenue." The day before Christmas in 1932 I saw a fellow shouldering his way gingerly through the crowds in front of the library with the gentleness of big men not used to sidewalks. My friend of the Rhine steamer.

Among New York's contributions to the world's sinking fund of woe is Don Clarke, who, submitting to an agrarian impulse, has been trying to grow flowers in the hot-house atmosphere of a pent-house garden. Something came shooting up through transplanted soil, but not roses. A cook's careless scattering of raw turnips sprouted instead. In such crazy profusion, all the earth had to be carted away.

On a swaying bus top, lines race through one's head. A fusion of poetry and prose. Her hair like gold did glisten . . . Falero, lero, loo! . . . Julius Tannen, jay walking, makes a safety isle by an eyelash . . . Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs . . . When Chaplin comes to town he stops at the Ritz . . . And walks in the long dappled grass . . . Fanny Ward, in a leather jockey cap, turns into the avenue. Isn't that Andy's wife with Clara Bell Walsh? . . . The harp that once through Tara's halls . . .

I am determined to attend no more banquets as I did at the Waldorf recently with their bravura of fictitious fellowship. Always the same exuberant talk. And forever the bore rising with the chubbiness of one thoroughly enjoying after-dinner oratory. Banquets died with Depew. They were designed for capitalists to don false beards in pretenses of altruism. I'm too permanently disillusioned by rascals to applaud such nonsense.

Something draws me to Charles Evans Hughes. I do not know the man and outside of his insurance investigations his contributions to the common weal are sketchy to me. Having so little of it, I think it is his dignity which attracts. I'm glutted with the national vice of smart talk. Life has taught me people who do most by their kin are not back-slappers and wise-crackers. They are aloof in laboratories, in a quiet study or lonely tower. Rarely are they "quaint and amusing."

Edna Ferber drew me up today about my comment of her inland upbringing. In a gay note from Phoenix she reminds her birthplace was Kalamazoo. Although an almost next door neighbor of Edna Ferber's for years, I always classify her as a prairie gal. She knows so much about those huddled-up dots on the midwest horizon—as much as Sinclair Lewis—and. But I've just room to note that New York dramatic critics changed it to: "O, go jump on the lake!"

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Motherhood Is Becoming a Racket

I am a mother.

I believe in motherhood.

I believe that motherhood is the most natural and should be the most beautiful and profitable career for women.

I also believe that a fine mother wields a power second to none on earth. Hers is truly a holy life.

BUT—

I don't believe that all mothers are fine mothers—

Nor that even most mothers are fine mothers.

To the contrary, I believe that the profession of motherhood is beset with as much ignorance, carelessness, laziness, crookedness and downright graft as any other profession on earth.

And I am increasingly convinced that, under suffrage, American motherhood, AS IS, is a menace to this country.

Strong words! Yes—and they'll cost me many an admiring reader. For you can criticize anything else on earth, but you mustn't say a word against the Modern Mamma.

But they are true words, which should be said. And—just because motherhood to me seems the highest of all callings—I'm going to say them. For the sort of motherhood we too commonly see is a blot on the profession.

No craft on earth calls for more technical knowledge and careful training than that of a mother. But what actually happens? The average mother knows less about her job than a Supreme Court Judge knows about toe-dancing.

By some miraculous hocus-pocus, a mother is supposed to become automatically endowed at the first birth pang with all requisite wisdom and skill . . . as well as a Sanctified Character. Henceforth, she is on a pedestal—for life. And there is no crime on earth more sordid than lack of reverence for A Mother.

THIS IS PIFFLE—AND NOTHING BUT! Mothers must achieve sense and stamina by exactly the same slow, plugging methods which other humans use. Birth pangs have no more power to endow a female with wisdom than have bunions, hives, varicose veins or fallen arches. Nor do they leave the slightest dent on the character.

If you're a Peevish Pinhead before the little darling is born, you're a Peevish Pinhead after. And no more entitled to medals than any other Peevish Pinhead.

Yet, though these facts are obvious to the simplest Intelligence, society, en masse, rejects them with scorn. Probably because society, en masse, was raised by Mamma. And all too often, Mamma makes a racket of her job. Beginning with this business of birth pangs . . . a most disagreeable business, to be sure, but not, in the long run, any more painful, dreary or even dangerous than the arduous job of supporting the baby after it comes.

I have borne a child, supported children, and I shall always maintain—

THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE HAS NOTHING ON THE FIST THAT BRINGS HOME THE BACON.

It requires just as much courage and consecration to be a good father as it does to be a good mother. And—feminine propaganda to the contrary—it's as tough on the nerves. Only Mother takes hers in concentrated doses, over a few years. While Dad is still trying to pay off the second mortgage when he dies.

These facts, however, are pishtushed, if not entirely denied, by most mothers. Mothers, for some strange reasons, think that baby belongs to THEM. BUT ANY FATHER WHO SUPPORTS A CHILD HAS AS GREAT AN EQUITY IN IT AS THE MOTHER WHO BEARS IT.

This discussion would seem to be a matter for Mom and Dad to wrangle out between them. But, unfortunately, it has far graver implications. The importance of a GOOD mother has always been beyond reckoning, but of recent years, since they got the vote, ALL mothers—some of them heels of the worst order—have acquired incredible power. Editors are in awe of them. Judges tremble before them.

When it comes to potential deadliness, Mamma's Tears make T. N. T. look like sweet butter. As a consequence, poor old Dad hasn't a Chinaman's chance, in most courts, before an outraged Mother.

All of which makes most of us deluded females think we're sitting pretty. But I'm telling you, sisters — WE'LL REGRET IT SOME DAY! We can't get by on our sob record forever. Sooner or later they'll make us observe a code!

Human Side of the News

Gordon Sinclair's New Book, 'Cannibal Quest,' Is a Whirlwind of Adventure

By Edwin C. Hill

NEWSPAPER owners and managing editors are human, in spite of the opinion of many newspaper reporters. Occasionally they weary of the hum-drum run of news they have to print, however indispensible or important that news may be. They get tired of the stock market recovery programs, kidnapings, unsavory divorce suits and the almost unvarying pattern of the daily news. They yearn for the romantic, the picturesque, the mysterious. The lure of the old East gets into their blood. If they can't find the thrills they want on this side of the world, they send their bright young men to the other side to see what they can see.

James Gordon Bennett, the younger, had a way of shooting his reporters south of the Equator and East of Suez whenever the impulse hit him hard. When he ran the old New York Herald he would fire a cable at a moment's notice ordering men to queer corners of the earth, expense no object. The most famous of all Bennett's assignments was Henry M. Stanley's invasion of Darkest Africa to find Dr. Livingstone.

Mr. Hearst has done pretty much the same thing for the last 30 years to put color into his papers, and William T. Dewart, who stands today in the shoes of James Gordon Bennett, keeps Bob Davis on the run collecting the oddities of human nature wherever they are to be found on the seven seas and the five continents.

Reporter Given Great Assignment

THE same yearning for the strange and the bizarre must have dominated the management of that very excellent newspaper, the Toronto Star, when they called in a breezy young reporter named Gordon Sinclair and told him to gallop around the equator, without prejudices, hopes, plans, worries, fears, itinery, guidebooks or inhibitions, equipped with nothing but his two eyes, a passport, a tireless curiosity and a portable typewriter.

The result was considerable added shine to the Toronto Star, and Mr. Sinclair's new book, which he calls "Cannibal Quest." It's a whirlwind of travel and adventure, guaranteed to rest any mind from too much speculation as to how the New Deal will terminate or what will happen to the dollar. It is full of cannibals and head-hunters, vampire bats and rogue elephants, Bali beauties and black magic. As much as any book in recent years, it goes to show the extraordinary differences between East and West, further proof in black and white of Mr. Kipling's unhappily threadbare masterpiece of an epigram that "East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet" . . .

Young Gordon Sinclair, eyes shining over a newspaper assignment such as come to few reporters, thrilling to the quest of the unknown, had the time of his life and snaps it into colorful English, a little more slangy than need be, but vital with the feel of new things. His immediate goal, jumping off from Sydney, Australia, was New Guinea, that unknown, unexplored, unmapped jungle-hell, where bone-crushing savages live as they lived in the Stone Age, with neither clothes, nor tools, nor laws.

Wives come by seizure and conquest and the men are slaves or cannibals. Tribal warfare, black magic and sacrificial rites reap a grim harvest of human skulls which are stuffed and decorated as ornaments of triumph. For 200 years men have been trying to penetrate the tangled mass of crawling death which is the New Guinea interior.

People Gripped By Superstition

BLACK MAGIC, devil work, holds all New Guinea and her primitive people in its terrifying grip. The people are afraid of everything, afraid of strange noise, afraid of a shadow, afraid of spooks, gnomes and witches.

The Rev. John Dewhurst Bodger, Church of England missionary, had more than a touch of this weird business, as Gordon Sinclair tells the story. A mad fable of a blood-red lake far back in the green hills puzzled the government for years. Mesmerized men, dying from voodoo, told doctors that they were being killed by the evil eye, directed their way by the magic eel of the blood-red lake. The missionary heard of white ghosts who chanted and moaned in the dark, and of vampires that sang. He determined to find the blood-red lake and organized an expedition.

He found it. It was as red as blood and surrounded by trees that were all aglow with orchids which gave off a luminous shimmer at night. He took a swim in the lake and was stricken down with burning fever. For six weeks he was delirious and his life was barely saved.

Beatrice Grimshaw, the writer, has lived in Papua more than 20 years. Her books on Papuan life have been praised by scientific organizations in 13 countries. Yet Miss Grimshaw believes in the black magic of the Papuan witch doctors.

From terrible, black, blood-ridden New Guinea, Sinclair journeyed on to one of the little Paradises of earth, the Island of Bali. East of Java and south of Borneo lies Bali, the Island of Enchantment. Aloof and serene with peace of mind, long life and contentment. Romance studs the beaches, laughter fills the homes and music tinkles along the leafy lanes.

Here, says Gordon Sinclair, is the spot the world has been looking for, a sanctuary where nothing much matters and there is no greed, where the sun shines and the bands play; where there has been no murder for 18 years; where divorce is unknown; where there is one jail and that empty; no orphanages, no poorhouse, no income tax. The natives have never heard of gangsters, racketeers or alimony.

'Doctor' Roper Doctors Up Aeronautics Bureau

By James T. Williams, Jr.

TO his miscellaneous collection of honorary academic degrees, Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, has just added another.

Rollins College in Florida has bestowed upon Secretary Roper the somewhat unusual but highly honorary degree of "doctor of humanity."

Although the citation does not so specify, the latest but not the least of Dr. Roper's varied assortment of academic honors doubtless is intended as a recognition of his recent transformation of the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce from what it was, when Dr. Roper put it on the operating table last summer, into what it is after the ensuing ministrations of the new "doctor of humanity."

When the aeronautics branch went under Dr. Roper's knife it was the best organized and most efficient government agency anywhere in the world charged with the regulation and development of civil aeronautics.

Political Aviation Is Promoted

A SERIES of surgical operations by Dr. Roper since last summer has transformed this federal agency into national headquarters for the promotion of political aviation. Its promotion of preferred pilots, operators and political favorites by means of planned publicity and an extensive underground political hookup with both houses of Congress, with the Democratic National Committee, with disgruntled bidders, because unsuccessful for mail contracts, and their former employes, is really an extraordinary achievement in the field of administrative surgery.

Unfortunately for Dr. Roper, his colleagues in the allied school of aviation medicine were highly suspicious from the outset of his designs upon the aeronautics branch. This was made unmistakably plain by resolutions which were adopted at the last annual meeting of the Aero Medical Association.

Behind the language of parliamentary action the resolutions of these distinguished flight surgeons and medical examiners implied, regarding Dr. Roper's proposed operations:

First—That there was danger of removal for political reasons of medical examiners of the Department of Commerce whose selection prior to Dr. Roper's arrival in the operating room has been based on ability and training.

Second—That there was danger of appointing additional physicians for political reasons in areas already well represented by competent medical examiners, who would thereby be deprived of sufficient work to keep up their technique and maintain their efficiency.

Third—That Maj. R. F. Longacre, until recently the able medical director of the aeronautics branch, had been forced out of the Department of Commerce in spite of his demonstration of unusual competence as a flight surgeon and medical examiner.

Fourth—That changes in policy then under consideration by the department with respect to medical supervision of pilots would, if made, result in a general and dangerous lowering of the standard of physical efficiency throughout the pilots' profession.

Fifth—That such changes in policy would ultimately bring about a serious condition of affairs in the commercial aviation of the country.

Recommendations Sent to President

IN view of the dangers to air Americans who fly as pilots or passengers and to the air transport industry inherent in this threatened "economy program" of the Department of Commerce, the Aero Medical Association, at its meeting in Chicago, urged upon the President a series of most vital recommendations. The sum of these was that Dr. Roper be ordered to withhold his knife before disaster overtook American progress in the field of civil aeronautics.

This unexpected and emphatic protest finally reached the ear of the President and for a time the surgical ambitions of Dr. Roper were curbed. But it was not long before he and his assistants were back in the operating room hacking away at the helpless body of the aeronautics branch.

Today this one-time federal agency which commanded the respect of the country and of the world for the integrity and expertness of its work is one of the most active political and publicity bureaus in the federal city.

By the skill of his organization and the discriminating distribution of his patronage, Dr. Roper has been able to head off a Congressional investigation of the results of his doctoring in the aeronautics branch.

Meantime as a newly initiated "doctor of humanity," Dr. Roper is open to congratulations from his colleagues in allied schools of medicine and surgery.
